A Young Scoundrel. CINCINNATI, Nov. 27 .- The criminal annals rarely have such a chapter as that added in the case of Reed, a 16-year-old boy arrested here Wednesday night. His father is a well known broker living in an aristocratic district on Walnut hill. When Reed was 13, he became a cigarette and yellow-covered novel fiend. He soon developed into a first-class tough.

One morning, two years ago, the city was startled by the story of a sensational rebbery by the use of chloroform of Reed's father Detectives ran the clews down, and found that young Reed had done it. The father declined to prosecute, and sent the boy to an uncle in Indianapolis. In a few weeks Reed robbed his uncte of $600 and fled, but was apprehended and sent to the reform school. There he stole tobacco, and bribed a boy to bring him chloroform, which he used on the clerk to rob the office safe. He didn't get into the sale, but got enough money to escape, and then went south where, he boldly declares, he did many jobs. Wednesday he was arrested as a fugitive from justice. He glories in his actions, and will never be anything but a

ELMIRA, N. Y., Nov. 27 .- Frances J. Vincent, widow, and her son Albert L. Vincent, of No. 43 West Clinton street, are in jail, waiting the result of injuries to Charles Jones, caused by four bullet wounds. Jones is the manager of the Postal telegraph office in this city, and is unmarried. He called at Mrs. Vincent's and asked if Miss McFarland that young lady had just moved next Mrs. Vincent, who answered the call, said shortly: "I know you; give it to him, Bert." Jones, who has an im pediment in his speech, tried to explain, but before he could do so the boy, who is only 15 years old, drew a revolver and began firing. One ball entered Jones' bdomen, and another loged in his leg. The wounded man was found in a critical condition by passers by, and the police were informed. The Vincents were aken into custody, and Jones was renoved to the hospital.

(national liberal) spoke in defence of the | building swayed so much that the elevapolicy pursued by Bismark as chancellor, and commented adversely upon the course adopted by Caprivi, Herr Babel (socialist leader) criticized the rapid increase in the imperial debt and the army and navy appropriations. He contended that it was inevitable in the event of war that number of German states should become sankrupt. How, he asked, could such mmense masses of troops be long moved and fed. Expressions have recently been used which conveyed to these masses of oldiers the idea that they might be em ployed not only against an enemy within the empire. Agitated murmurs from every part of the house followed this allusion to the recent utterance of the emperor. Herr Babel, continuing, said that with every thousand new recruits social democracy was being more strongly infused into the army. As Chancellor Von Caprivi had pictured journalists as only propagators of unrest, he lelt bound to say that many orators were also engaged in the work of agitation, and related as an instance the speech recently delivered at Erfurt by this per-

At this point Vice President Count Ballestrom interrupted the speaker, refusing to allow the emperor's speech to be subjected to cr ticism. Herr Babel said he would leave his comparison in the bands of the public, who well knew that it was not journalism that spread the feeling of unrest through the country. Touching the protectionists policy, he said the heavy tariffs imposed by the government, coupled with the military xpenditures, created enormous economic difficulties. The slight reduction in the corn duties in the treaty of commerce with Austria was not sufficient to off set the want of proper nourishment from which millions suffer, the result being an enormous increase of disease, mortality and crime. The structure of the middle class of society, Babel continued, was built in a swamp in which it was slowly sinking, probably to make room for an other and better social organization. The | ing him in the back of the neck and country had got rid of one enemy of ocial reform when Bismark was driven from power. Here Count Ballestrom again catled Babel to order, declaring the expressions used in connection with the ex-chancellor's name could not be permitted, being directed against absent members of the house. Babel that Bismark had not yet taken his seat in the house, and proceeded with the denunciation of the government, which, he asserted was tollowing, as far as it dared, in Bismark's footsteps, while
