His Wife the Eulogist.

John Campbell, the pioneer who died at Sunnyside a few days ago, had no minister to stand over all that was mortal of him and tell of his good deeds. His good wife Elizabeth, whom he married fifty-two years ago, performed these offices over him. She talked in a clear unaffected tone and told what a good busband he had been for fiftytwo years, and she hoped that as her children passed away the living would feel toward the dead as she felt toward her late husband. The ceremony over, Mrs. Campbell was overcome with emotion, though she showed no sign of it while speaking.
