In your weekly paper of the 10th you seem to think that Col. Lang, as an advocate of protection, strikes hard blows at free trade.

One side may sing loud songs, but the public will be the judges "for a' that." The undertaking to use the cheaper cost of a foreign product, or commodity, or of a manufactured article, sought by laboring men, as an objectionable national policy, calling for great, political difference as absurd. It is the right of every man to buy what he wants wherever he can buy it cheapest, no matter if it is in England, France or Germany, or wherever it can be produced the cheapest, and where it can be had at the least cost to Americans. This calls for free trade, to ensure it to our laboring population, or those who have to save every dollar to make both ends meet. If John Jones, of Canada, sells one dozen eggs for 15 cents we ought not to be forced to pay Ike Jones 20 cents, because they are laid in Oregon If I can buy an English or a German hat
