UNSAFE THEORIES.

The Populists have assumed the po sition of the saviors of the country. and, according to their doctrine, they will change legislation so that it will be in favor of the poor man. Then object is to inaugurate a millenium in which the ills of the unfortunate victim of circumstances will be remedied. and, although he may have spent his earnings in wasteful expenditures, he will be placed on an equal footing with those who have practiced the strictest economy and thereby accumulated wealth. This sounds well to the toiler. who has labored for the bread which perisheth; and spreads before him th hope of better days. There are so many evils which have been burdensome on the common people for untold years that any promised relief is very attractive, and any plausible theory is tenaciously grabbed like the strag is by the drowning man.

The world has existed for many thousand years, and during that long period systems have been reduced to practice, and only the fittest have sur vived. About two hundred years ago a brainy Scotchman by the name of John Law attempted to revolutionize the monetary system of France by introducing the idea that the government stamp could make any quantity of money. His scheme proved unsuccessful, and John Law became a bankrupt. Again, the idea was advocated in Texas at a time when the Lone Star republic was in great need of a circulating medium, and the result was depreciation and bankruptcy. Not withstanding these demonstrated facts, the Populists declare they have found a panacea for this stringency in the money market, and they claim they can revolutionize matters if the people grave. will trust them with the management
