VICTORIOUS IN DEFEAT.

The message of President Harrison, which is published in the dispatches to-lay, is the last one which he will deliver to the people as executive of the nation, and is a document worthy of his well-known ability as a statesman. It was expected that in his farewell address, when the administration of public affairs was about to be changed to the control of the Democracy, seme mention would be made of the economic principles which have actuated him during the four years he has held the reins of government, and in this the public are not disappointed. At the election in November last, Mr. Cleveland was elected on a tariff-for-revenue-only books. platform by so large a majority that it
