We have received the Illustrated Annual of the Oregon Statesman, of Salem, for 1893. It is a very creditable number, and is the ment the capital city has ever received. The illustrations are of the principal citizens and leading business men of Salem to assume his legislative duties. He is joint-senator for Sherman and Wasco counties except "money, notes and achouses and state institutions. As an evi-dence of the enterprise of the publishers of the Statesman it undoubtedly is conclusive that they have the energy and "push" to be an important factor in the development of that portion of the northwest.

Last week we announced that we would have a white Christmas, says the Price-ville Review, but in this we were mistaken. At the time of publication—Friday night—the ground was covered with night—the ground was covered with seven inches of snow, the air was crisp and cold, and the mercury registered ten degress above zero. But the savior of Eastern Oregon, the chinook wind, began blowing, and before dark Saturday evening all the snow had disappeared and mud was everywhere supreme. Since then our weather prophet has been stricken dumb, and there will be no more prophetics about the weather in this prophecies about the weather paper until he recovers.

The Grand Dalles Swindle. Portland Dispatch.

The most gigantic swindle of the last year now seems to be located at a fictitious place represented as the "The Grand Dattes," By the brilliant descriptions scattered throughout the east, it should be called the "Grand Dazzle," What has given the swindle some color of substance is that a minister of the gospel is acting as heralder and trumpeter for the fakement. It is stated that a great city on the Columbia river just north of The Dalles, had been builded, and that the hum of machinery in a score of factories disturbs the usually still and quiet atmosphere which usually envelops the plateaux and barren mountains, by day and by night; that the streets were graded and electric cars connected it with Oregon; that the place was brilliantly illu7:30 P. He had invested in the Grand Dalles and had come to spy out the new city. After allowing his dinner to settle he concluded to take a trip across the river and look up his purchase. He asked Mr. Smnott, proprietor of the hotel, when the next train went across the river. Mr. Sinnott, seeing went across the river. and said that it was the only one he could see and he thought that was in an Indian cabin.

Mr. Sinnott inquired if the stranger had any interest in the Grand Dallee, and the latter replied that he had investe! $20,000 on the representation to the agents and had been lead to believe that the place was large and flourshing, and that there were lots of established industries, especially glass factories and granite works. Mr. Sinnott said there was enough sand on the beach for all the glass factories in the world, and as for granite, there were mountains of it, never touched, and not likely to be. The stranger did not faunch and threaten to burn up the whole country, etc., but fell into a deep study. The next morning he surveyed the plateau from the balcony of the Umatilla House and then took the first train for the cast. He will probably devote some of the grand Dalles swindle.

Cob-Web Sociable. From Friday's Daily.

A very pleasant and agreeable time was spent last evening at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Myers. Strings had been wound around tables and chairs in a yery intricate manner, and the principle amusement was in tracing these to the beginning. After this difficult feat was accomplished a countiful refection was served to the guests. Those present were: Misses Rose, Annette and Myrtle Michell, Ursula, Louise and Ione Ruch, Clara Story, Iva Brooks, Grace Campbell, Margaret Rowland, Grace Marden, Maybel Mack, Caddie Booth, Miss Suing Himself.

A good story has been allowed to lie around for a month without giving it to the public, and the Pendleton Tribune considers it to good to keep. It appears that a citizen of Pendleton had loaned $100 to his father, taking a note for the amount. The father resided in New York state. The aforesaid citizen sent the note back east to attorneys, instructing them to sue his father and remit. In the meantime, the old genleman died, leaving all his property to the itizen. The attorneys said nothing, enered suit against the estate, ran up the harges and took the costs out of the rest ine of the estate. This amounted to the citizen suing himself on a note due himself, instructing the attorneys to enter suit against himself, securing judgment against himself for the debt and costs against himself and paying to himself the whole amount. If any one can beat this record of brilliant financial engineering, let him speak or forever after hold his peace.

After Many Years. Salem Statesman: O. F. Canfield, a stockman and mine owner of Idaho, arrived in the city last night from Grangeville, I laho, en route to California to visit his father. Forty-tive years ago Mr. Canfield was a resident of Polk county-when Oregon City was the metropolis and seat of government of the state, when there were only four or five houses in Portland, and when Salem was practically out of sight-and his mission here is to visit his old friend, Hon. J. A. Baker, with whom he crossed the plains in '47. He came down to the Willamette JUST RECEIVED valley from Idaho in the interests of the Hudson Bay Co., just after the Whitman massacre and resided in Polk county until fifteen years ago, when he returned to Idaho. Mr. Canfield is quite partial toward the Hudson Bay Co. and says its people were the most hospitable and generous of any then in Oregon. More aid came from Dr. McLaughlin, he says, than fro
