The M. E. parsonage at Oregon City was built where it now stands in 1843. The next year Rev. Gustavus Hines planted in the company from furnishing water during his yard a seedling apple tree, which was then one year old. This is believed to be the first apple tree planted in Oregon. In 1854 Rev. H K. Hines harvested 12 bushels of applee from the tree, and he sold them to W. P. Burns for $9 a bushel. But the historic old tree, which has grown to be more than a foot in diameter and talier than the house, is to come down to make improve—
