Rifles, shotguns and the block was soon a mass of flames, and pistols are in the hands of men or on every corner, and a stranger might infer that a riot was in progress. Eck McCarty, a stepson of William, was taken in charge, as he had taken a hand and a wholesale conflagration seemed certain. After six bours hard struggle the fire was finally gotten under control, having consumed in all 15 places of busi ness, a boarding house and restaurant and in aiding their escape. No one can tel seven dwelling houses. While the fire was at it height, another blaze was starnow the affair will end. Blood will sureflow, it is said, as the McCartys say hey will not be taken alive. It is report ted that the officers will burn the building in case all other efforts fail, but this rould be dangerous, as the house stands in a block which, if fired, would burn all the business portion. Fred McCarty, the 18 year-old son of William, was arrested
