SESSION

It is again announced that a special session of congress is to be called the first of September, says the Inter Ocean, or not later than the fifteenth of that month, or the first of October, This time it is added that Mr. Cleveland does not think he will change his mind. Perhaps he will not, but judging from the record of his first month in office he is very liable to change his mind several times before the spring and summer are over. No president has ever shown such agility in climbing from one side of a fence to the other as Grover Cleveland, and he seems to be getting more agile every day. His last feat of the kind was on the giving out of the announce ment of the removals of the fourthclass postmasters. Hardly had he given out the order for the suppression of the news before he countermanded it. The hornets of the Washington press got after him before night and he was stung into crying for quarter almost instantly. The truth is, that every known rule laid down by him he proceeded forthwith to violate, seeming to think that violations and not exceptions prove the rule. Of course such a President may change his mind a dozen times in a season and not excite our especial to convene as early in the fall as the weather permits. But September is the worst of all months in Washington. It is hot, sultry and miasmatic. Between the blazing sun by day and the fogs of the Potomac flats by night Washington is about the worst imaginable hole for September. But when the nights begin to be cool and frosty it is delightful, and congress should get down to business early enough to get through before the next summer financial fallacy to say that the United With few exceptions the congress States can single-handed change the men will have no public affairs to keep them at home. The only state elections of next November are four, all told, namely, Iowa, Maryland, Obio and Virginia, and none at all in October. In Maryland and Virginia there will be no contest at the polls. The president is not suspected of any very lively interest in Boies of Iowa. If he should be turned down by the people next fall the grand lama of the White House would see in its righteous retribution for the effrontery of being a bona fide and uncompromising Chicago convention of last summer. He didn't make haste to get out of the way, either, when he saw the mighty road, as did the more thrifty Isaac P. Gray, of Indiana. Gray has already entered upon his reward, while Boies and the Iowa Democracy generally seem destined to hear only the awful malediction, "Depart from me, ye cursed." But while Mr. Cleveland might be quite willing to pi Governor Boies' form, he must feel very anxious to defeat Governor McKinley for reelection. Neither he nor his advisers will fail to take into account the prob able effect of an extra session upon the campaign of that state. Eleven of the twenty-one members of the house from that state are Democrats, but they could all be absent from the stump Brice, he has only to send his contri-

It has fallen to their lot but seldom. They had it late in Jackson's second term, when they overturned the National bank and reduced the tariff. The hard times of 1837 followed almost immediately. They had it again in 1854, and the birth of the Republican party was the first result. The hard times of 1857 and the rebellion of 1861 followed in their natural sequence. The generation which knew that series of events and felt the agony of it had to pass away before the Democratic party could make another clean sweep of the country and once more be intrusted with all the reins of national authority. If Mr. Cleveland had more information and less conceit, he would look forward to the next session of congress with no little apprehension, and that for his own reputation, the future of his party, and the good of the country.

The price of an article in the market is governed by certain fixed rules, and these are so simple that any one may understand them. Labor and demand are the bases of all values, whether of a bushel of corn or the most complicated mechanical instrument, and money is simply a convenient representative of value, to be regulated by its production. All commercial nations, with the exception of France, take gold the standard, and silver, nickel, copper, or other circulating medium, are governed by their relative not intrinsic worth. During the past few years there have been two attempts to make both silver and gold standards; but is not more powerful. The strike on the Union Pacific still continues, and, although no inconvenience has been felt on this end of the line, there can be no doubt that it is causing damage to the business interests of the company. If these difficulties could be settled by arbitrators, the council of arbitration to be appointed by the government, a clear understanding would be had of the rights of both parties concerned. Cor porations as well as employes have interests which should be respected, and to arrive at a just conclusion as to which is the injured party, and whether the proper and only available method of redress has been adopted, are matters which require the most careful discrimination. This action of the legislative body was impelled by determined riots in that city during the past few days, and which threatened to eventually mature in a widespread revolution similar to that which changed the political complexion of France during the latter part of the held in The Dalles. people can no longer be treated as serfs and tyrannized over at the will armies of the monarchies of Europe, an explosion might be expected any day that would render unstable every kingly throne in the old world. The soldiers of the czar, composed of ignorant peasants, are the most loyal subjects of the emperor; but nihilism has quite a hold on the officers. In Germany the paternalism of the government cools the rancor of revolution; but the educated soldiers and officers are leaning toward free institutions. These Teutons move slowly, but, like their northern descendants, the English, when once in motion an avalanche set the example, and the contagion will spread to her neighbors.

The sea is running very high and all craft are unable to venture out of the harbor. A small vessel is ashore at the head of Juneau avenue. The worst feature of the gale is the probable loss of 20 lives by the washing away of a house over the crib at the terminus of the new water works tuonel. No men are in sight and it is believed that they were swept away, but they may be in the air-lock below. Five or six men can be seen clinging to the machinery and timbers of the water works crib. The water is sweeping over them. It is thought that the others may be dead in the chamber below from lack of air. The lifesaving crew has been unable to render assistance to the water works crib last night. Un less rescued soon, all that may be alive at this hour must perish, as the crib is submerged by every wave. It is reported five of the lifesaving crew refused to obey orders to go out in the lifeboat. The tug Stark left the barbor at 9:30 A. M., but was forced to return. The sea broke in the pilot-house windows, and cut Capt. Chris Miller quite severely. There is talk of manning the revenue cutter John son and going to the scene. Captain Da vis signifies his willingness to make the attempt if men can be secured to man he lifeboat. The small vessel ashore at he head of Juneau avenue is the Lorena. A tug is now on the way to the scene with a lifeboat and men on board. She is making slow headway, and is fairly buried by the sea at times.

ONLY ONE MAN RESCUED. The tug Welcome has returned from the crib. The life savers found one man, whom they rescued. He will probably die from exposure and exhaustion. As there are no signs of any of the rest, it is believed the 21 men were either swept away or are dead in the crib cham

The man rescued from the wrecked water works by the tug Welcome and the lifesaving crew was so exhausted when taken aboard the tug he was unable to speak. He recovered sufficiently just be fore being taken to the hospital to be able to tell those about him that his compantons were all in the air chamber besuffocated. Two bodies were seen floattesaver who reached the crib. His name is Olson, and he was badly handled by the sea while performing his noble work. Captain Peterson, of the lifesaving crew, was badly hurt about the head. It was an anxious crowd that stood on the shore and looked at the crib this morning.

The sight was the most awful one anybody in the vicinity had ever seen Waves fully 15 feet high dashed over the crib with terriffic force. All that was left of the crib was a couple of posts that had supported the house and one of the pumps. The two large boilers, the enon the crib had been washed off. Twenty minutes after the house was washed out of existence, the entire matained that had been left, was lifted directly into the air, apparently by the combined force of the waves and wind. and everything was burled into the raging sea, many feet below the level of the crib. One of the most pitiful incidents in connection with the disaster was he spectacle of the aged father of Engibeach, vainly trying to see through the mist and catch a glimpse of the poor boys changing to the crib. "Joe is home sick, good for him," he said, "but Mikey is out here, and I wish he was home sick, too."

Tennessee's Miners NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 20-A reporfrom Tracy City. At 2:30 this afternoon all was quiet. Troops, numbering 125 men, under arms, had entered the stockade and the miners had dispersed. In the fight last night one miner was killed and five wounded. Two of them may die. One guard was dangerously wounded and Deputy Warden Shover slightly. The fight began at 11 o'clock and, after the repulse, desultory fighting was kept up all night. When the reporter left Tracy City it was believed by the officers charge that the trouble was over, as the miners had not expected so strong a remilitary companies in this city, which did not leave this morning, are still awaiting orders.
