

ITEMS IN BRIEF

From Wednesday's Daily.

Some fruit trees are in bloom.

Mr. C. H. Blalock, John Oosty, and J. O. McKinney, of Walla Walla, are registered at the Unatilla House.

Mr. James McCormack, of California is spending a few days in The Dalles looking around for vacant land on which to settle.

Mr. C. M. Grimes, of Huntington, is in the city today. He is a Dalles boy, and is engaged extensively in shipping cattle from Eastern Oregon to Portland and the south.

Rev. Geo. W. Grannis, of Portland, is in the city. He stopped over on a day en route from Pendleton to visit old friends, and will return on the morning train.

Mrs. H. Prinz and Mrs. M. Laporte, of Monterey, Calif., arrived on the afternoon train today, and will visit at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. T. Prinz, in this city.

The railroad commissioners left Portland this morning, and may be expected in the city this evening. They are inspecting the lines of the Union Pacific, and will arrive on a special train.

One disaster in the backwash of the rain is the loss of sheep by the death of lambs. The losses have been very severe in some sections, and the sheep will continue until the weather becomes warmer.

Mr. H. L. Boynton, has opened a farmstead on the east end of the Skibbe's lake in the East End. He will have a large flock of sheep, and will also keep hay and grain on the place.

We received a call today from Mr. J. M. Hagerty, representing the Chamber of Commerce Prospects, a pamphlet that has been prepared by the Chamber of Commerce, and contains a list of the prospects in the Dalles, and will be distributed to the grounds at the Columbian exposition.

Last Saturday Mr. C. M. Grimes took to Portland from Huntington twenty-four carloads of beef cattle. These were gathered in Malheur county, and were in prime condition. This was the largest shipment of cattle ever made from Eastern Oregon.

A warrant of arrest for assault and battery was issued yesterday against John Davis, and the trial is set for tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock. The facts in the matter should not be discussed until after the trial, and we simply mention the fact of the arrest.

P. J. White was arrested by Officers Grannis and Billis last night in Ben Wilson's saloon in the East End, and placed him in the county jail. Nothing was taken from the saloon, but the owner, ascertained, and his manner of entering could not be definitely determined.

Dr. Blalock, of Walla Walla, is in the city. In speaking of the pump that he is operating on the river near his farm at Blalock, he says it does its work admirably and furnishes all the water required for irrigation. His young orchard is growing nicely, and in a few years he will have an abundance of fruit.

The sheep at this side of Cold Camp, says the Antelope Herald, seem to have done better in lambing than those at the side of Eugene Looney and brothers last 150 lambs up to April 20, and probably have lost several lambs to the weather.

Last week they had frightfully rough lambing weather up there.

There are different theories about high water. Some old timers say that it came what can possibly stop a flood in June, while others are not apprehensive of any flood, because the pump that they are using, is likely to continue until the snow has gradually melted in the mountains.

This question will be definitely settled in a few weeks, and it is then high water the grade of the city will be above its ravages.

Mr. C. E. Haight made an affidavit today before Mr. J. M. Haight, that he and Frank H. Bowen were continuously in his employment in his restaurant in this city from the 25th of January, 1933, to the 1st of February, 1933, and this will be forwarded to Mr. Bowen's attorneys at Portland, Ark. Bowen is charged with the murder of Col. Clayton, committed there on the 25th of January, 1933.

It would be well for our business men and citizens generally to hold a meeting tomorrow evening to take some action in regard to having the city of the Dalles properly represented in the Chamber of Commerce Prospects, which will be distributed today and tomorrow in the city. This will furnish an available opportunity to advertise our advantages to the Chamber of Commerce, which will be at Chicago during the summer.

While riding from Arlington to Willows, a distance of ten miles, the passengers on yesterday morning's train experienced a remarkable change in climate. At Arlington the ventilators were all open, fires in the stoves had been allowed to burn brightly, and the passengers were comfortably warm. At Willows the temperature became so chilly that the passengers imagined that they were in the north pole, and it took red-hot fires to afford relief.

The water of Park reservations, in the mountainous parts of Oregon and Washington, to preserve the timber from destruction, which has been a considerable extent, is one that is questionable to the results which it promises.

To the close observer of the forest, it is one that is questionable to the results which it promises. The fact that the facilitating of settlement, under proper restrictions, would conduce to the increased and better use of the forest, and that the withdrawing of such large tracts of country from settlement is not conducive to the better use of the forest, is one that is questionable to the results which it promises.

Tourists in passing through The Dalles spend considerable time in viewing the view of Grand Dalles, Wash. From the porch of the Unatilla House, the view of the river is one of the most beautiful in the world. It is a view that can be had of this river (3) of Chicago, the "great railroad center of the United States" and the site of the famous factory, the prospective glass works and roller mills and iron furnaces; terminals of the sympathetic telegraph line with Berlin, Paris, Constantinople, Jeddah, and Yokohama, and the site of the ship railway over the Dalles portage and of several lines of navigating machines. These are in perspective, but the sand and rocks are tangible realities, the force and speed of the current of which can easily be demonstrated by taking a walk through Dupuy's avenue, Grand Dalles, Wash., when a gentle sycamore bloweth.

Very few salmon are being caught at present, and in a conversation with Mr. F. A. Seufert this morning we learn that he does not expect to catch many until the last days in the month. Usually about the 25th or 26th of April the wheels make their largest haul. Then the water is high, and the rapid current in the center of the river drives the salmon into the shallows on the sides, where the wheels are situated. One peculiarity about this trout and lake-bait fish is that they swim through the swift current and often over falls, while the silver-sided jumper in the air when they meet obstruction and fall into the water about the rapids. Mr. Seufert has frequently watched these salmon in their migrations up the river, and has been astonished at the quality they exercise in making their progress against apparently insurmountable obstacles. If the modern salmon fisherman were instinctively could be utilized in machinery, could be propelled against the swift current, but so far as the fish is concerned, it is a miracle.

From Thursday's Daily.

Mrs. Walton is very sick at her residence in this city.

Mr. T. H. Johnston, the merchant of Dufur, is in the city.

Mr. J. L. Story returned from Portland this evening on the Regulator.

Geo. W. Fulton and wife, of Portland, are registered at the Unatilla House.

Mr. J. K. Rowe, of Albion, was a passenger on the midnight train last night.

It rained beautifully last night, and the street sprinkler was not needed to day.

The east-bound train was a few minutes late this afternoon by reason of a slide near Cascade Locks.

The following death was filed for record today: Henry C. Coo, ex of Georgiana, Rand; lots 3 and 4, block or section A, town of Waconia, $800.

Our genial deputy county clerk, Mr. Edward Martin, has been confined to his room since Sunday. To-day was the first time he was out for some time.

P. J. White, the man who broke into Ben Wilson's saloon Tuesday night was afflicted with delirium tremens, and his examination will be held tomorrow.

Daniel Hoffman, former agent of The Dalles, has been granted a pension of $8 a month, and has about $2000 back pay due.

C. O. Meina, an agent for M. B. Stevens & Co., has papers for him and will be pleased to know his friends' address.

Baker City has two liquor cure "institutes," and not satisfied with the jugs they bring, is making efforts to secure in unusual. Some people never will be contented.

The governor and state treasurer will not be delighted by the rays of Eastern Oregon sunshine. They have experienced months so long that they can appreciate clear weather.

Mr. Wm. Wight, of Crook county, is in the city. He came in town to be in the middle of his home, who is seriously ill at his residence. He is now 70 years of age, and his recovery is doubtful.

The steam schooner Alice Blanchard, which became disabled off Cape Point, weather and finally drifted into Yaquina bay on the 5th inst, and went high and dry on a sand spit, was successfully pulled off Tuesday night by the Oregon Pacific Railroad Company's tug Roanoke.

Mr. Ben. Backus, living in Thompson's block, who was killed by a falling log, and another, with an accident this morning resulting in a fracture of the left arm below the elbow. The first-class animal, became fractious and gave him a vicious kick. Dr. Hollister was called, and the young man is resting calmly at his home.

Hospitals are not always blameless in their treatment of patients, although they are the best place to get medical attention. The attendants trained and careful. A Portland hospital has been used by a patient who was suffering from a disease of the eye, and he contracted smallpox while under care for typhoid fever.

L. M. Douglas, the big shoe man, whose picture constantly appears in the Times-Mountaineer, is talked of as the next candidate of the Democrats for governor of Washington. Mr. Douglas lives at Brookton, and is 48 years of age. He is a live advertiser, and hence has the qualifications for making a first-class candidate.

We have received from the Oregon Agricultural Experiment Station bulletin No. 25 for April, 1933. The subjects treated of are entomology—growing moths and bugs; economic zoology—goats and moles; and the various valuable information on these subjects that grain pests and insects, and by every one interested in their culture.

Gov. Penneyer and State Treasurer Metcalf arrived here yesterday evening, and as soon as they landed they were met by the citizens' committee and driven down to the Irving farm. They will leave on the midnight train for Baker City, Hon. E. C. Cordon and Hon. R. F. Gibson met the committee at the locks and accompanied them to the city on the boat.

Monsey's Albany Democrat: Yesterday at Yaquina bay, while an effort was being made to get the Alice Blanchard off the sand, the boat and its back broken and is now a total wreck. Only about 20 tons of cargo were saved. The boat was carrying something, the purchaser saving 80 bushels out of it. The boat was well insured, and the loss cannot be too great.

The Telegram of Portland, says: "Quite a number of Chasmen are coming into the office of Revenue Collector West. To receive their certificates. Many of these hopeworms who have leased and planted hoppyards, and are anxious to avoid any liability of being fined. Others are farmers and servants, who have been here for years, and whose employers insist on their registering."

Ashtland Record: Southern Oregon is to have a gem of a state tax—the Antelope Herald, seem to have done better in lambing than those at the side of Eugene Looney and brothers last 150 lambs up to April 20, and probably have lost several lambs to the weather.

Last week they had frightfully rough lambing weather up there.

There are different theories about high water. Some old timers say that it came what can possibly stop a flood in June, while others are not apprehensive of any flood, because the pump that they are using, is likely to continue until the snow has gradually melted in the mountains.

This question will be definitely settled in a few weeks, and it is then high water the grade of the city will be above its ravages.

Mr. C. E. Haight made an affidavit today before Mr. J. M. Haight, that he and Frank H. Bowen were continuously in his employment in his restaurant in this city from the 25th of January, 1933, to the 1st of February, 1933, and this will be forwarded to Mr. Bowen's attorneys at Portland, Ark. Bowen is charged with the murder of Col. Clayton, committed there on the 25th of January, 1933.

It isn't the usual way to turn the reverse — to pay a patient when you cure him. Never. You pay the doctor, not the patient. It's the only way to keep the doctor's hands clean.

I have cured thousands of the worst cases, where everything else failed. You can be cured, too. If you can't, you get the money. They're willing to take the risk—you ought to be glad to take the medicine.

It's the cheapest medicine you can buy, because it's the only one that gives satisfaction, or your money is returned.

You only pay for the good you get. Can you ask more?

That's the peculiar plan all Dr. Pierce's medicines are sold on.

BORN.

WEBER—At Hallsville, March 28th, to Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Weber; formerly master mechanic at The Dalles, a son.

Real Estate Transfers.

April 19—James M. Hickenbottom to Frances I. Hickenbottom, wife and son, block 2, Thompson's addition; $1.

April 19—Anna Lischinger to Cincinnati Corvinton; lot 9, block 21, Laughlin's addition; $800.

April 20—Salasia A. Lay and Marion F. Lay, her husband, to Charles E. Lay, lot 4, block 1, town of Hood River; $150.

April 20—Hood River Town Site Co. to Salasia A. Lay; lot 4, block 21, town of Hood River; $103.70.

A Tornado Sweeps Over Mississippi.

MEMPHIS, Miss., April 20—A frightful tornado crossed the Mississippi river yesterday afternoon. The storm originated in Jasper county, 85 miles south of here, and traveled in a northeasterly direction. A settlement of negro cabins was destroyed and many of the unfortunate inmates perished. The storm was especially severe in the vicinity of the river, where the plantation was swept clean, but fortunately none of the family were injured. From this point to Barnett, 30 miles north, the storm was equally destructive. It killed one of the largest plantations, owners in the south, is a heavy loss. His son had been severely injured, and his wife and daughter were slightly injured. A negro on the plantation, named Henry German, with his wife and nine children, were killed. The storm struck the kitchen stove slowly raised the roof of the cabin. Fire originating from the kitchen stove slowly raised the roof of the cabin. Three miles east of Barnett the wind struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees. His wife and children were burned in the ruins, which caught fire and they would have perished but for the timely arrival of the police. A little further on three negro cabins were struck, and two negroes killed and several badly wounded. The storm then struck a neighborhood of farms. P. Leggett's store was destroyed, and the stock of merchandise in the store was carried away by the branches of the forest trees.