THE "ROBBER TARIFF."

During the campaign last year the Democrats never tired of speaking when put in nomination, and those against what they were pleased to who placed him in power should term the "robber tariff," and promised the people that the party when once in power would relieve the public from this burden. In their platform that tariff for any purpose except such laws would be repealed if the opportunity presented. Since Cleveland was inaugurated six months only have elapsed, and Secretary Carlisle during his former incumbency of the says the receipts are not sufficient to pay the expenses of the government, and there is a daily deficit of $170,-000. Those who listened to Democratic eloquence last year will be anxious to find out in what manner the tariff laws produce any extravagance, when they do not furnish sufficient the administration. It is true that during Republican control of affairs the receipts were more than enough to meet the exigencies of the nation, and they furnished a surplus fund to be used in public improvements. The same "robber tariff" is in operation now as when Mr. Harrison was president-the McKinley bill has not been repealed, and if, under its provisions there is not enough money received to The Geary law is very sweeping in its stopped? UNIVERSAL FRATERNITY.

The world's fair will do a good work in its attempt at the fraternization of mankind, and in this it will be successful to a certain extent. No one believes that by bringing together daughters must read in reputable Saxon and Celt for a few days or weeks that either will completely forget the prejudices or pride that have attached to each race through long centuries of history. It is true that the Saxon and Norman, though bitterly opposed to each other at the time of the conquest, have long since buried their animosities, and both enjoy equal pride in the modern conglomerated type of mankind known as Englishmen. But while this commingling at Chicago may not break down the walls of caste, it will at least introduce different peoples to each other, and will afford an opportunity, by careful study, to all philanthropists to take a broader view of the human race. When the American meets the Italian, German or Frenchman of culture and refinement, he must know that the native of this country, although privileged beyond others in the enjoyment of free institutions, is still on no higher plane in the amenities of civilization, than he who was born on ehe shores of the Adriatic or of the Baltic. The fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man will be the lesson taught, and it may be expected that this will be heeded in a certain measure in fuure international relations.

But in no line can we expect greater world's congress of religions will bring protestant and Catholic, Buddhist, smooth down in some instances the rugged surface in each which have peretofore caused continuous friction. Fraternization among religious men should lead all other advancements, for if people cannot meet on an equality in matters which concern the welfare of the soul and a future state of existence, how can it be expected that they will harmonize in temporal effairs where the interests of the individual or nation are purely selfish? Progress is the spirit of the age, and mosscovered ideas have been trampled under feet and superstitions which have been venerated for ages have been ruthlessly dispelled. The world's fair is presumed to be the high-water mark where modern civilization and point; but it is to be hoped that the tide will never recede, and when the rebels are having a hard time of it. Bold Train Robbers. KENDALLVILLE, Ind., Sept. 12-Another daring and successful train robbery is on record. The New York express train on the Lake Shore road, which left Chicago at 7:45 last night, reached a siding at Keslar, five miles west of here, at l o'clock this morning. Approaching it, Engineer Knapp noticed a red danger signal light at the switch, and stopped the train. As he did so, twenty men, armed with Winchesters, sprang out of the woods, scattered along the train and covered the trainmen, while one fired at loyalty and that of the troops in the city, the engineer, inflicting a wound in the shoulder. With everything in hand, the robbers proceeded to blow open the forward express car with dynamite; then, knocking the express messenger senseless, exploded five dynamite cartridges in succession against the safe before it vielded. They belped themselves to its contents, the whole performance occupying an hour, when without making any attempt on the other express car, or in terfering with the passengers, who re-mained in the cars, panic-stricken, they fired a few warning shots and disappeared in the woods. It is rumored the robbers secured $250,000 in transit from one of the Chicago banks to New York. The rumor is not yet verified. The train came on here and the alarm was given, and the sheriff at once summoned a posse and started in pursuit of the bandits. Engineer Knapp brought the train here, but was unable to go farther on account of his wound. It is believed he will recover. There were two safes in the express car, one for through matter. o which the messenger had no key, and one for local matter. The robbers compelled the messenger to open all the safes, from which several thousand dollars in currency were taken. They then blew open the big safe with dynamite. In the outer compartment was $250,000 in gold, with which the robbers loaded themselves, not stopping to open the inmore money. In their haste to get away the robbers also overlooked two gold bars.
