

GOOD TIMES COMING.

It is not surprising that after a successful administration of national affairs for more than thirty years by the Republican party a change by the Democratic policy should create distrust among financiers and capitalists, and this is simply the condition of affairs that the country is now experiencing.

The lesson taught, aside from that of a political nature, during the present financial depression may be of great practical benefit to the people of the United States. For many years times have been good, and there has been little economy practiced regarding expenditures.

The proceedings of the world's congress of religions, now being held in Chicago, furnish very interesting reading matter. After one becomes somewhat acquainted with the theology of the far east there is not so much absurdity in the doctrines as is generally supposed.

From this view of the case the pessimist has no foundation for the prediction that the turning point in the national career has been reached, and that hereafter it will be necessary to exercise more economy in all departments.

A PRACTICAL LESSON.

The lesson taught, aside from that of a political nature, during the present financial depression may be of great practical benefit to the people of the United States.

RELIGIONS.

The proceedings of the world's congress of religions, now being held in Chicago, furnish very interesting reading matter.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The school of oratory in Washington City is still in session. Cases of cholera have been reported on the Atlantic seaboard, smallpox in New York and congress is in session.

The ways and means committee has begun its work, and now Democrats all over the country will "bob up serenely" demanding protection for local industries.

They do things quickly in Brazil. A few weeks ago a republic was the ruling government; but in a day or so very likely the old empire will be re-established.

During the present financial depression there will not be much extension of railroads; but we learn from reliable information that at an early date a road will be constructed from this city to the interior.

This is good, business sense from an exchange. "If Grant county only had a large crop of hops and a little less of something else, a wonderful change in money matters would be experienced."

It seems that congress cannot be influenced by newspaper criticism. On the one hand, the Democratic press are urging the members to pass a free-coinage measure and adopt the free-trade plank of the Chicago platform.

Webb, the American who was lately converted to Islamism, attempted to defend polygamy before the world's congress of religions in Chicago last Wednesday.
