

HELPING THE POOR.

The politicians and the newspapers that criticized John Wanamaker for raising money to prevent hard times are not criticizing him now for raising money to help the poor through the hard times, says an exchange. Mr. Wanamaker does not see any great difference in the two funds except that it is always better and wiser to prevent disaster than to try to cure it.

In an interview, published in the New York Sun, Mr. Wanamaker says: "I am raising money for the poor people now as I did once before."

He thus boldly referred to the campaign fund he raised for the Republican party in 1888, about which the Democratic newspapers made so much complaint, and added:

"I raised that money and gave it conscientiously as I am raising money for the poor now. I raised it to down a free-trade party which would have brought this same Wilson bill calamity on us then that they have now. I believed that with the free traders, the tariff would be out. I knew this would lower wages, stop mills, and send the workmen starving into the streets as it has done now. No one could tell me that I was raising that money. My heart told me to do it. I went out among the Christian business men of Philadelphia and told them the danger to prosperity ahead. They thought it were wiser to stop the tariff destroyers than to feed the starving thousands, as we are doing now. They gave the money freely and said: 'Take it to headquarters, publish documents, hire speakers, reach the masses with truthful statements, and save the nation threatened with calamity—the same calamity which has finally come upon us. We saved it and made four years of such prosperity as we will never see again till that blessed prodigious tariff comes back again.'"

Mr. Wanamaker estimates the losses to the nation through the Wilson bill calamity at $3,000,000,000 a year, and thinks that $300,000,000 contributed by Philadelphia business men to prevent that loss for four years was a very good investment. There are 20,000,000 workmen in the country, and they did earn, on an average, $2 a day, or $40,000,000 as the total earnings in one day. This gave them $12,000,000,000 a year as the earnings of American workmen. The cut of 25 per cent. made everywhere in wages, without counting those thrown out of work, gives a loss of $3,000,000,000 a year, or $12,000,000,000 for four years of the administration.

The sum of $300,000,000 is a large one when taken alone, but when it is considered that sum is but one four-hundredth of 1 per cent. of the actual loss it is a very good investment.

The newspapers and politicians who assailed Mr. Wanamaker for his campaign fund in 1888 followed his example in 1934. The New York World was Mr. Wanamaker's most staid critic in 1888, but it was the loudest beggar and greatest defender of campaign contributions in 1934.

Mr. Wanamaker says that he had no thought of any office when he raised the money for the campaign of 1888, but when President Harrison offered him the position as postmaster general, he, like other men loving honor, accepted it, though his time to his own business was worth ten times the salary he received. But Mr. Wanamaker has no need for defense. He made the best postmaster general the country had in many years, and since campaign funds are necessary, he has been trying to prevent the present disaster by keeping the Republican party in power.
