The strike on the Great Northern Railway, tying up one of the great railway systems of the country and paralyzing business in several Northwestern states, is a new order of labor trouble which we hope will not become prevalent, says the Inter Ocean. It is not a contest between capital and labor, but a bitter rivalry between labor organizations. The railroad is simply the victim of a warfare between the confederated brotherhoods which have represented all the classes of railway men in their dealings with the Great Northern, and the American Railway Union, a comparatively new organization, which is ambitious to become the controlling power in all railway labor movements. The Great Northern Railway Company proposed certain schedules, which were thoroughly considered and approved and adopted by the grand officers of the brotherhoods of locomotive engineers and by authorized committees representing the men themselves. This agreement concerning schedules and hours of labor was reduced to writing and went into effect March 1, 1894. Other proposed changes affecting the conductors and trainmen were formulated and considered by officers of the company and the unions, but were to be finally submitted to a vote by the men affected.

This was the situation up to last Friday, when the general organizer of the American Railway Union wired the officers of the Great Northern that unless the schedules in force before August 1893, were restored there would be a strike at noon that day. Chief Arthur, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; Chief Sargent, of the Firemen's Brotherhood, and Mr. Clark, grand chief of the Conductors' Brotherhood, all deny the right of members of their organizations to engoge in this strike. They are with the railway company in maintaining that agreements are as binding upon the men as upon the corporation. The officers of the American Railway Union are accused of ordering this strike simply to break down the influence of the federated brotherhoods. Chief Arthur in an interview says:

"Our organization was the original railway brotherhood and was founded in 1863, thirty-one years ago. We have struggled through adversity and philosophically met defeata. We have learned much by experience. We number 35,000 in the United States in a product, and is befinning to mo opolize the can read. He was in town last week. Do you suppose that we would hold contracts with over 75 per plies are in excess of consumption. ter to the companies? Our records show that we have paid out over $4,000,000 to widows and orphans and that we have increased the wages of engineers from $2 to $4 a day. Should men lightly put away these results of a tried and faithful brotherhood, true to their interests, for the A. R. U., a new and untried one? We cannot stop our men from joining the naw federation if they desire. If the golden experience of thirty years with all the results, is worth nothing, if the B. L. E. has outlived its usefulness, then it was time that it was put away."

These are the words of the most conservative and best leader any orcountry has ever had, and they show his keen disappointment over the action of many of his men in breaking faith and following after a leader who declares a strike not so much to bring the railroad to terms as to deliver a blow at the old brotherhoods by showing his superior influence and the superior advantages offered by the new labor organization. In all strikes the laboring men have had the sympathy of the great majority of the people, test with capital. But here is a strike and the paralysis of a great railway system, the inconvenience of travelers wages to thousands of railway to employes are caused for no other purpose than to demonstrate which of two less.

The less of the loss of creek used and the loss of creek used as a two-ployes are caused for no other purpose than to demonstrate which of two less of creek used as a two-ployes are caused for no other purpose than to demonstrate which of two less of two less of the launched on the Columbia, and will follow the columbia of two less of bor unions is the stronger. When the strike has descended to such a plane it should have no sympathy and no consideration whatever.
