London, Sept. 30-Advices received by great floancial houses in London are understood to confirm the worst news re garding the condition of the czar of Russia. His majesty's condition is said to be hopeless, and his death can be delayed only a few months. The general opinion in this city coincides with that expressed in Paris and Berlin, that the accession to the throne of the czarowitch will result in depriving France of a friend. Persons closely associated with the czarowitch believe that when he ascends the throne he will materially alter the policy pursued by his father, and will cultivate cordial relations with England and Germany, and will hold aloof from France.
