The Democratic press for two years past have attempted to shift the blame for the business depression from their party, and the task has been a hopeless one. In every instance in which the people have rendered a verdict at the ballot box, that verdict has been to saddle the present hard times on the Democracy, and the people are not mistaken. The effrontery of charging it on Republican administrations has almost ceased; but in an exchange we find the following ingenious attempt to exonerate its party from all blame:

"The Republican editor who at tributes the financial and industrial troubles of the past two years solely to the Democratic party is surely either a fool or a liar. In either case he deserves no readers. The Democratic editor who asserts that the Republican party is solely responsible for the hard times, strikes, etc., is either a liar or a fool; and as either he should be held in contempt by all people. An editor, above all other persons, should not be a fool, and should tell the truth. The truth is: In so far as any party is responsible, the Republican party must bear the greater part of the blame; because 10 wis in power when these evil times were conceived and tred. If legislation is responsible, it is Republican party legislation. But no party, no legislation is altogether, or principally to blame. Several causes, of which Repuplican misgovernment is only one, have brought about present conditions."

The plain facts in the matter will admit of no equivocation, and are easily understood. In the last message of Mr. Harrison, facts and figures ware given showing that the country was more prosperous than ever before in its history. There was more money in saving banks and higher wages were paid than at any previous period, and from the reports of Democratic labor commissioners the operation of the McKinley law had been proved to have been very successful. This was in
