CHURCH AND STATE. There cannot be any doubt that the A P. A., or American Protective As sociation, is growing in influence and numbers in the United States, and that today the members have a wider field of operations and more sympathizers than they had a year ago. This is caused by an unfounded fear on the part of American citizens that the Catholic church is inimical to free institutions, and that its policy is dictated by the pope at Rome. This is a mistake. There are members of this Christian denomination who are as truly American as the descendants of the Puritans who landed at Plymouth Rock over two centuries ago, and who would not under any circumstances follow dictation from the Italian pontiff. Their country to them is as dear as it is to the Presbyterian, the Methodist, the Baptist, or the Unitarian. They were born here, so were their ancestors, and individual freedom is paramount to all other considerations. This is as true of the Catholic as of the protestant, and during an eventful history of more than a century no people have displayed a more unselfish patriotism than Americans. The foreign subjects of European monarchs fight for their king and queen; but the citizens of this republic contend for their birthright, their homes and their liberties, for they alone are sovereigns. Religion can make no difference to the citizen, and if he bends the knee to the trinity or makes confession every week to a priest, or worships what he considers the higher ideal of one supreme ruler of the universe, it cannot diminish in the least his love of home and country. It may be true that in post ages the Romish church has attempted the most arbitrary rule over its communicants, and invariably united things temporal and things spiritual; but there has been a remarkable change in this regard in all religious denominations. There was time in the histery of England when Episcopacy was a synonym for the most cruel oppression, when Bishop Land upheld King James in his butcheries in the "bloody assizes" and when even our own Puritan ancestors persecuted innocent, peaceful Quakers in Massachusetts and hanged witches in Salem. These are black spots in the history of Christianity, and if the Catholic church were more vigilant in these persecutions it was simply for the reason that she had the power to exchange. trines of the despised Nazarene the gressive. sword by which bigots have slaughtered thousands of their fellow beings; it has filled the world with heartburn- For this question arises -Is negro ings and bitter revenge; it has del-

HOME CONSUMPTION.

The "change" inaugurated in 1892 has been felt in other ways than the depreciation of wages and the reduction of the price of home products that come into competition with foreign ones. In speaking of this subject the Inter Ocean says that, while the free traders are tearing down the protection defenses to let American roducts out into the markets of the world, as Mr. Wilson puts it, the reasury statistics show that they have not only made it possible for the English manufacturers to share our own market, but they have actually reduced that market.
