This play attracted a crowded house last night, and long before the curtain raised every seat was occupied. Every part was well taken, and from the first act to the last the greatest interest was manifested. The parts were as well delineated as if the actors were professionals, and we see n reason why this dramatic club should not make this a specialty and give performances throughout the country. Worthy of particular mention was the make up of each particular character, and me this regard the amateurs were equal to prafessionals. Comparison is favidious, and the manner in which each trait of character was represented was worthy of the highest commendation. The hero was finely portrayed, o was the scheming villain, and the rollicking obseracter of the wit and homorist ent acquitted themselves so admirably as the personations of characters, and the artist in this particular has a more difficult role to feel than he who simply uses his brush and pencil. The actor has not only to be agreeable to the eye of the intelligent listener, but also has to satisfy his intellectual discrimination. Coaracters are not studied today simply because they represent the costumes and range of thought as they existed in the days of Shakespeare, Goethe, Knowles, Sheridan and Bulwer Lytton: but as they are representatives of an artistic and even scientific presentations of a range of being that appeal to a cultivated discernment of the particular type. Thirty-nine years ago yesterday occurred he Indian massacre at the Cascades, Ocegon. Perhaps to only one man residing in Pendleton thoughts of the anniversary and the terrible Northwest Indian war of 1855-6 recurred. The acenes were tresh in the mind of Judge Bishop, who has reason to vividly recollect the devestations of the Indians during that war. In speaking of the Cascades massacre yesterday he said:

had gone away from this point to guard others, and the Indians, seeing their opportunity, besieged the town. In two days Colonel Wright, who, with about 500 men of the Ninth regiment, Second dragoons and Third artillery, had started for Walla Walls, returned, hanged eight or nine Indians, put the rest to flight and relieved the tained last week a record of sale in South Omaha stockyards of a bunch of Umatilla county cattle. They were from the shipments from Echo, of Jesse Moore, Lloyd & Saylor and Nye & Dillion, which were sold mostly to Portland parties and then sent east by the Union Meat Company. The sale record showed: One steer, 1060 pounds, $3 per 100; 49 steers, 1221 pounds each. $4 10; 24 steers, 1260 pounds, $4 35; 164 steers, 1267 pounds, $4 35; 109 steers, 1208 pounds, $4 20. These steers sold at Echo for $3 per hundred and when weighed for the buyer averaged 1300 pounds. It will be noticed that the weight was reduced during transit 33 pounds in the 164 lot, and from that to 92 pounds in the 109 lot. The weight of the Oregon cattle was above the average of all cattle offered on the day they were sold, and the price paid was on the average several points above what was recorded in the sales of other lots of cattle on East Oregonian that wheat-fed cattle of Eastern Oregon are bringing as good figures as any and in some cases fancy prices, even when sold beside the corn-fed steers of Kansas and Nebraska. Portland's Population

The Evening Telegram says: Comlete census returns from 54 precincts in the city show a total population in these precincts of 62,500, of which 16,-300 are legal voters. The portion of the city not included in the returns lies in the business district, where there are habitants of which will swell the list considerably, and Assessor Greenleaf esimates the completed returns from the entire city will show about 75,000 residents. The returns from 54 precincts Nevada's dream-Jube's got the bead on show 1500 more persons than the census of 1890, which gave the population of the districts now in the consolidated city as 61,000. keep the system and the special internal organs in good condition. The young girl, or woman, often grows pale, wrinkled and thin, eats little, everything wearies her, she complains of herself as aching and sore and as sleeping poorly. Often she is troubled with backache, or a tender spine, with a bearing-down weight in the abdomen, or at periods she may be irregular, or suffer extreme pain from functional derangements.

Dr. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, of Buffalo, N. Y., in his long and active experience, met many cases of this kind, for which he used a prescription which was found to care such difficulties permanently in ninety-sight per cent. of all cases. Having proven as successful, Dr. Pierce put his "Favorite Prescription" on the market, and it is to-day sold more largely than any other medicine for the ills of woman.

For all functional derangements, displacements, ulceration, inflammation, and the catarrhal drain from the lining membranes of the special internal organs of women, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription reaches the origin of the trouble, and corrects it.
