The ship Cupica, with a cargo of tin, arrived at Astoria Monday, 199 days from Liverpool. She had been given up as lost, and many of the canners of the lower river had duplicated their orders for tin. The ship experienced remarkable rough weather during almost the entire trip. Tin will now be most the entire trip. Tin will now be plentiful as the Cupica had enough, and another lot is on the way.

In The Dalles items in the Oregonian today is the following: "The first clip of this seasons's wool arrived at the Wasco warehouse today. The ship-ment is from near Hay creek, and of fine quality." This may be the first fine quality." This may be the first clip that the correspondent noticed; but the TIMES-MOUNTAINEER pub-lished an item of the arrival of a load of wool from Dayville at Moody's warenouse about three weeks ago.

Baker City, says the Democrat, can probably claim the highest feats of bicycling in the world, and the more wonderful it is that young ladies are entitled to the honor. The roof of the Hotel Warshayer has of late been the place selected by several young women to practice wheel riding. The roof is as smooth as glass, is four stories high, and is adequate in size for learning the art. Most of all, it is secluded and repeated falls cannot be observed by an unsolicited audience.

THE OREGON PACIFIC.

Will be Built Into Eastern Oregon, an Furnish an Outlet for Crook and

In conversation with a person who has just returned from the Willamette valley, and who has interviewed the directors of the Oregon Pacific, we learn there is not the least doubt that the railroad will be constructed into Eastern Oregon as soon as the sale is confirmed by the supreme court. There cannot be much doubt that the proceedings will be considered regular and the sale made good. If the decision of the supreme court is favorable a force of men will be put at work as soon as possible in preparing the road bed and laying rails, and it is expected by the time snow flies the whistle of the locomotive will echo through the valleys of Crook county. The people of Prineville are not favorably disposed towards the railroad, but it is a matter of business with the company, and the directors are determined to have a share of the trade of the Inland Empire. This will be no benefit to The Dalles, without our citizens have sufficient enterprise to build a road into the interior, and thus "head off" the Oregon Pacific. Portland and the O. R. & N. are interested in this matter, and it would be greatly to their advantage to control the trade of the interior by means of the Columbia river. They can do this by building railroads into Crook and Grant counties; but if they take no action it is very apparent that the wool and other shipments of these districts will seek an outlet via the Oregon Pacific to

O. R. & N. CO. The Company Improving The Road Along The Line And The Bridges to be

Major J. P. O'Brien, general super intendent of the O. R. & N. Co., was in the city yesterday examining the property of the railroad in this vicinity. He took a trip down to the high bridge, a few miles west of the city and also to some of the bridges east of The Dalles. Since the lease of the Union Pacific has expired the O. R. & N. has displayed considerable enterprise in placing the road in first-class shape, and when the work now in operation is completed the line will be in as good condition as any in the country. When the road was built several bridges over gulches were constant expense in keeping in repair. The object is to do away with the tres tle work, and fill the gulches with dirt. Every year there are expenses incurred in keeping them in good condition, and then they frequently burn and during freshets are washed out. This bill of expenditure will be curtailed, and the object of Major O'Brien's visit to this city was to look over the work and see how it was progressing The receiver, Mr. McNeil, left New York yesterday for Portland, where he is expected to arrive in a few days. His visit east had for its object the interests of the company, and the results may be expected to be seen in a little while.

The Cold Storage Co., in this city, shipped three carloads of potatoes to Omaha yesterday. This is but the beginning of a good export trade, which will inure to the benefit of the community. There are fruits and vegetables grown in this vicinity for which a ready sale could be made in the east. and the Storage Company will furnish a means of transportation for our producers. Every season there would be large quantities of fruits and garden growths shipped if they could be placed on the market in a saleable shape, and the facilities of this company are such that with refrigerating cars it could put our early vegetables and fruits in as good condition in the Chicago and New York market as they are when offered for sale here. This cold storage idea cannot be considered an experiment, or in any manner a novel arrangement, for the necessity of such a company has been apparent to every one who has made the leas observation of the means necessary to bring us in touch with eastern markets.

heavy wind storm prevailed in this portion of the northwest. The railroad men who came to the city on the freight and passenger trains describes the velocity of the wind as something terrific. In passing over the sandy regions east of the city they say the sand darkened the atmosphere, and at times it seemed as though it were impossible for the cars to keep the track. Fortunately no accidents occurred, and as they stepped off the train at the depot they felt relieved of a great anxiety.
