The Eugene Register says: The Pay ton comedy company presented at the opera house last night the interesting opera house last night the interesting comedy, "Seth Swap," followed by a laughable farce, "Dodging for a Wife." Senter Payton certainly "swapped" for "Seth" in a most admirable man-ner; and his daughter Lucy carried the part of "Miralda" in a way that charmed her audience; in fact, the whole cast did well, and those who witnessed the performance went away well satisfied. The farce consisted of one round of fun and ridiculous situa-tions, and was well received. This ends the Payton Comedy Company's engagement here after a run of five nights, which have proven, from a financial standpoint, to be the most lucra-tive that has been done in the theatre line in Eugene for a long time. They may come this way again. Should this be the case, it is a foregone conclusion that they will be greeted by good houses.

Oregon's Lieu Lands.

Salem Statesman: A Statesman reporter yesterday saw a letter written by the commissioner of the general land office at Washington, S. W. Lamore 1x, to State Land Agent Davenport from which was gleaned the amount of land to which the state will be entitled in lieu of sections sixteen and thirty-six of the unsurveyed areas contained within government forest and mineral reserves. The commissioner furnished the list at the request of Senator Mitchell and Congressman Hermann. The showing is as follows: In the Cascade reserve 285‡ sections: in Bull Run reserve nine sections and in the Ashland reserve two sections total 2962 sections or 189,600 acres. This will form a tangible basis from which Mr. Davenport can proceed, the next step necessary being to ascertain where suitable land can be obtained in lieu thereof.

An American, who has been making a study of the Japanese army since the opening of war with China, says it maintains the most rigid discipline, the maintains the most rigid discipline, the soldiers taking fierce pride in obeying all orders to the very letter. They march without music or banner, moving shoulder to shoulder without song or jest or laughter, the rattling of their equipments being the only sound that is made. They arouse themselves without the reveille, and they retire at night without drum or bugle. Once night without drum or bugle. Once before a battle, the correspondent heard them singing, but they were fierce songs of war and not songs of home. The only emotion they display is a wild pride in their country, and this is the feeling that carries them into a battle with impetuosity.

Oregon stands seventh of the states n the number of her sheep, having 2,-456,077. She is fourth in the produc-tion of unwashed wool, having 19,648,-616 pounds, and fourth in scoured wool, with 6,877,016 pounds. Ohio ranks first with Texas a very close second and California third, with only 210,000 and California third, with only 210,000 less sheep. Texas produces the most unwashed wool, but her product loses 63 per cent in scouring, while that from Ohio loses but 52 per cent, so that the latter outranks her in the scoured product. Oregon wool loses 65 per cent weight in scouring. The average weight of the Oregon fleece is 8 pounds.

Mr. D. B. Butler, one of the first white settlers of Wasco county, came in town from Dufur today. He resided here during territorial days, and when the Cascades to the Rocky mountains, and from the California line on the south to the Columbia river on the north. Mr. Butler was one of the rst constables in this precinct, and his bailwick extended from the Cascades on the west to Ft. Hall, now Idaho, on the east. He relates his experience in serving a subpoena, issued out of a justice court t The Dalles on a man residing at the latter place. It took him just a month to make his return, and it cost the defendant $200 to bring the witness to this city. Those were "flush" days; but law courts were a luxury that were not resorted to as a pastime, and on ly when other remedies failed. Shot-guns and pistols settled disputes more requently than civil or criminal processes of courts. The people were wary about taking advantages of their neighbors in any transactions, and the

the First Pioneers of Wasc This morning three of the first pioneers of the region east of the Cas-cades met in this city and rehearsed eager listeners. Capt. Amos Under-wood was the earliest settler, and has lived in this vicinity since 1852. He was the commander of the little band of heroes who went to the relief of the settlers at the Cascades in 1856, before Lieut. Sheridan—afterwards Gen. Sheridan of the Union Army, and one of the leading generals of the civil war-marched his command forward war—marched his command forward and punished the Indians for their barbarous acts towards defenseless women and children. The captain and his volunteers stopped the redskins in their devilish work, and Sheridan followed soon afterwards and gave them a lesson which they have not forgotten. Although past the meridian of life, he is still as hale, hearty and active as he was twenty years ago, and is possessed of a very retentive memory. The inci-dents of that terrible episode in the history of the northwest is still fresh in his mind, and their relation adds to the esteem in which all old pioneers are held by those who settled in this egion at a later date.

The next on the list in point of time arrival was Mr. D. B. Butler, the first constable of Dalles precinct, men-tion of which is made elsewhere. He recollects distinctly the massacre at the Cascades, and the escape of the steamer Mary with the crew and one or two passengers from the murderou savages.

Capt. John M. Marden, in business in this city, came in 1854, and there-fore comes later on the list than either Captain Underwood or Mr. Butler; but he is not behind either of them in thrilling experiences. He was judge in this precinct in 1858, and his remin-iscences of the manner of administering justice is something very interest-ing, and will form the substance of a future article for the TIMES-MOUNT-AINEER. At the time Lieut. David McI. Gregg was commanding at Warm Spring agency, Marden was captain of a volunteer company which did good service against the Snake Indians. On the 4th of July, in the later fifties, a celebration was held at the agency, and Capt Marden wished to display and Capt. Marden wished to display the perfection in discipline of his volunteer company to the regulars under command of Lieut. Gregg. To reach the camp of the latter a stream had to be crossed on a foot log, and this was considered the proper place for Capt. Marden to line up his men. The reg-ulars had drawn up on the right of the stream with well-brusned uniforms and burnished buttons and arms at present, when Marden gave the orders to "Right Dress;" "Load;" "Fire." This was done in honor to the flag and out of respect to the military branch of the government. The guns were muzzle loaders, and as they were discharged each soldier was thrown from his position on the log into the water about breast deep and cold as melting snow could make it. It is unnecessary to say that Lieut. Gregg and his blue coats forgot the rigors of dis-cipline for a moment, and joined in a hearty laugh at the volunteers. The boys scrambled to the bank as soon as possible, wet as drowned rats, and several without their guns. They swore vengeance against Marden, who was safe on the bank when he gave the orders; but his excuse was that it was impossible to "line" his men in any-thing like military precision except he placed them against the side of a barn or on a foot log over a mountain stream, and he did want them to show to an advantage in present of Lieut Gregg's regulars. Mr. Butler was one of the men who lost his gun in the stream, and says he has never "got even" on Capt. Marden for that little The time was spent very enjoyably by these three old pioneers, and their three three old pioneers, and three old pioneers, and three old pioneers of three old pioneers, and three old pioneers of thr experiences will form many an inter-esting chapter, yet unwritten, of the early settlement of the northwest.

A Cattle Pool Formed.

Says the East Oregonian; David Horne came in from Upper Mc Kay reek Tuesday evening. Stock buyers, says he, are quite numerous in the Long Creek and John Day country. They are offering $25 for 3-year-old eers, $15 for cows and from $8 to $12 for yearlings. All the stockmen of that region have formed a pool and stand out for higher prices. Pendle-ton buyers have recently been in that neighborhood and have paid as high as $28 for ordinary weight cows, Recent rains have put a different com-plexion on the livestock proposition and owners are feeling greatly enL'EVERY . SHOULD USE

The new vegetable shortening. It meets the most exacting requirements, and is beside entirely free from the objectionable characteristics of lard, long known and long suffered. Now deliverance has come. With Cottolene, good cooking, good food and good health are all assured. But you must be sure you get COTTOLENE and refuse all counterfeits Beware of imitations made to sell on the merits and popularity of COTTOLENE. Refuse them all, and your grocer will then understand that you know exactly what you want. This will bring you satisfaction and save you disappointment. Sold in 5 and 5 pound palls.

Dear Sirs—I have been a tobacco fiend for many years, and during the past two years have smoked fifteen to twenty cigats regularly every day. My whole nervous system became affected, until my physician told me I must give up the use of tobacco, for the time being, at least. I tried the so-call d "Keelev Cure," "No-To-bac," and various other reme ies, but without success, until i acci entaily learned of your "Bacco-Cure." Three weeks ago today I commenced using your preparation, and today I consider myself completely cured; I am in perfect health, and the horrible craving for tobacco, which every inveterate smoker fully appreciates, has completely left me. I consider your "Bacco-Curo" simply wonderful, and can fully recommend it.

Yours very truly,

C. W. Horsner.
