"We must suppose that one of the main subjects of interest at the International Railroad congress to be held in London, at which there are to be many American delegates, will be the substitution of electricity for steam as a motor power upon long lines of rail road. The question is a pressing one, and cannot be got rid of, or lost sight of. The trolley is already used upon hundreds of short lines and upon many of very considerable length. Before the use of the electric motor can be extended to all railroad lines, there are a number of questions that must be settled more definitely than they have yet been. The best chance yet offered for their consideration will be at the London Congress.

"We have spoken repeatedly of the conflict of interests between the trolley companies and the steam railroad companies in Connecticut. The dispute there has been carried into the courts and into the legislature, with results that have not been satisfactory to either party, and least so to the party of electricity. In Pennsylvania, also, the supreme court of the state has put the trolley at a disadvantage in so far as long-distance lines are concerned. In New Jersey, likewise, there is an important legal dispute between the largest railroad company there and an electric company desirous of running a trolley between New York and Philadelphia. There have been disputes of a similar kind in several other states. The case against the trolleys, in most instances, is grounded upon the vested rights of the steam companies.

"The dispute ought not to be con tinued any longer than may be necessary for the determination of the points at issue. If electricity is more efficient, more economical, and other wise more satisfactory than steam as a railroad motor, the fight against its general adoption cannot be of any avail in the long run. The existing railroad companies will either have to make use of it or give place to the new companies that use it. There is no in truth a practicable and a desirable

"The London congress will be body that can render a weighty judgment upon the relative value of the two motive powers for long-distance railroads."

PIONEER OF 1843. Interesting Facts Regardidg Dr.

McLoughlin. Mr. C. E. Chrisman called at the office this morning, and in conver-sation we learned the fact that he arrived in Oregon 51 years ago. He pays the highest compliment to Dr. McLoughlin, who was one of nature's noblemen. As a boy he recollects him going among the immigrants who had lately arrived from the east and supplying their wants. He was very kind to children, and as a pleasant remembrance he recalls the incident of the determinant of the determinant of the control of the determinant of the control of the determinant Last night the closing exercises for doctor placing his hand on his head the year of the junior class of The Dalles High School was held at the could do for "my little fellow." That winter, Mr. Chrisman says, the first flour was ground in Oregon City. The immigrants had a very toilsome journey across the plains that year, and were destitute when they arrived in Oregon. In this emergency Dr. Mc-Loughlin was the friend in need, and his kindness relieved their sufferings. His memory will always remain green with old pioneers, and now, when this portion of the union is connected with the others by rail and telegraph, com-parisons are frequently made between existence as it was and as it is.

It also contains a supersize of the message of United States and Mexico. It also contains a synopsis of the message of President Tyler to the senate, in reference to what had been done regarding the quintupal treaty. This article on Washington news closes with a paragraph noting the fact that the "Oregon discussion had been postponed." President Houston, of the republic of Texas, is mentioned as having convened congress. News from away out vened congress. News from away out in the west is dated at Nashville, Tenn., and the Pacific coast at that time was almost terra incognito. It is learned, he stated that the old man had considerable money on his person the evening be-fore his death, and when found had but a two-bit piece in his pocket. He advances the theory that his father was doped and robbed by someone and from the effects of the drug died. He does not know how to explain the letter found on the body but thinks it was a decoy, written by someone who knows the family, to throw off suspicion. The matter is to be thoroughly investigated, and if sufficient evidence is adduced to indicate murder, steps will be taken to bring to justice the guilty party or parties.

HARPER'S WEEKLY is a pictorial history of the times. It presents every important event promptly, accurately, and exhaustively i filiustration and descriptive text of the highest order.

The manner in which, during 1894, it has treated the Chicago Rallway Strikes and the Chino Japanness War, and the amount of light it was able to throw on Korea the instant attention was directed to that little-known country, are examples of its almost boundless resources. Julian Ralph, the distinguished writer and correspondent, has been sent to the seat of war, and there foined by 0. D. Wei don, the well-known American artist, now for many years resident in Japan, who has been engaged to co-operate with Mr Ralph in sending to HARPER'S WEEKLY exclusive information and illustration During 1896 every vital question will be discussed WEEKLY exclusive information and illustration
During 1896 every vital question will be discussed with vigor and without prejudice in the editorial columns, and also in special articles by the highest authorities in each department. Portraits of the men and women who are making history, and powerrol and countie political cartoons, will continue to be characteristic features. This Busy World, with its keen and kindly o mment on the lesser doings of the day, will remain a regular department.
FICTION. There will be two powerful serials, both handsomely i justrated—The Red Cockode, a stirring romance of olden days by Stanley J. Weyman,
