THE CAMPAIGN NEXT YEAR The Chicago Inter Ocean is an outspoken champion of Republican principles, but during the last year it has leaned toward the unlimited coinage of silver, or at least in faver of a modification of the present financial policy. In a leading article in last Friday's issue, in speaking of the issues which may control the next campaign it says: "According to the Washington Star the Republicans are making a strong effort to make the tariff question prominent in 1896, to the eclipse of the silver question. Very likely this is true. It is evident, in the light of 1894, that | many friends in different parts of the the people regret the election of Cleveland and a Democratic congress, and would undo that folly at once if they could. From a party point of view it is to be regretted that the status quo of last fall could not be duplicated in 1896, but there is no standing still possible in a republic. There is some constancy in political issues, and surely the tariff we always have with us, but to have it singly and permanent is an-

"The simple truth of the business is issue of the next presidential campaign as it is the tickets themselves. Some six months of congress must intervene between now and the holding of the conventions. There is now a deal of firing on the skirmish line, but these cartridges have no lead in them. Next winter and spring it will be dif-

"One important factor seems to have dropped out of sight, and that is that the country is now financially being protected from the 'robber barons' truce which ends in October. The Rothschilds, as the most formidable of them, have agreed, in return for the enormously profitable bond sale, to protect the gold of the treasury from a run until October. Two months before the regular time for congress to convene that flag of truce will cease to wave over the subtreasury in New York. Without attempting to figure out what will happen, it is surely safe to say that the gold question, now serenely debatable in the abstract, may take on a practical form that will compel some sort of action not authorized by any existing act of congress. In other words, it is not improbable that the administration and congress will be compelled to abandon the Fabian policy. What would happen if a Democratic president and a Republican congress found themselves compelled to protect the gold reserves from attacks which must be actively repelled or go to a gold premium, no one knows. Such an emergency would call for a higher statesmanship than held the reins at either end of Pennsylvania avenue during the first half of the present administration.

by main strength and political manipulation, the wise men of both parties quirements as they arise, and the party which shows the most of that spirit will be likely to command the confidence of the people as best equipped for the responsibilities of national authority during the last four years of the century."

The silver question will not creat any disturbance in that approaching ently very little interest. The whole national gathering of the Republican League clubs at Cleveland, says the Globe-Democrat. Such fears on this score as are held may safely be dismissed. It may be true, as report has it, that "Senator Dubois and others from the extreme west and of extreme silver notions announce that they intend to force an expression of opinion on the question," but their intentions are likely to be altered when they reach the meeting place. Dubois and his friends, after having a quiet talk with the representatives from the rest of the country, will be exceedingly apt to find that an "expression of opinion" on the free coinage of silver at 16 to 1 by the United States independently would be an expression which, for them, had better be left unexpressed.

A few weeks ago the Colorado Re publican league club voted down a resolution to direct that state's delegation to leave the Republican national convention of 1896 if that gathering refuse to declare for free coinage. Colorado has a greater interest in silver than Dubois' state, and her senators and representatives have far more ability and sense than Dubois. Colorado's Republicans see that a free coinage plank in the platform would demoralize and degrade the party in would not beat the party it would physicians. make the party feel that it ought to be beaten. No loyal Republican is going to ask the party to make any such sacrifice as this. No Republican national convention is going to make this sacrifice if it be asked. Has Dubois learned the fate of the Democrats who have been forcing "expressions of opinion" lately in their party on the silver question? Does he know what happened to the Democrats in Missouri who asked their state committee for such an "expression"? A financial delusion which is getting such kicks and cuffs from the Democrats will be kept out of the way of the Republican party if its friends are wise. The political status of free silver has changed a good deal lately, as Dubois will find out if he forces the issue in any representative Republican gathering. The monetary imbecilities and iniquities of 1893-94 have vanished with the hard times which bred them. and they will stay vanished until another business convulsion comes to subvert reason and to secure a hearing for the fanatics and the mountebanks. This is an exceedingly good time for men like Dubois and Carter to dodge "expression of opinion." For the next few years the policy of sense for the silverites is the policy of silence.

DAMON AND PYTHIAS.

The Rendition of this Celebrated Dram. by Mr. W. Rasmus, Assisted by Local Talent.

If The Dalles ever scored a success in the dramatic line it was last night when the play of Damon and Pythias was presented at the opera house. On every occasion, whenever the Home Dramatic club has appeared before an audience, it has won applause; but in the rendition of this drama the members were under the careful training of an artist, and the latent talent was brought to the surface. The citizens have not fully understood heretofore the merit of our local talent, but this will be fully appreciated hereafter. To say that Damon and Pythias was well put on the boards would not do justice to the appreciation of the excel-lent delineations of the characters, and praise cannot be given in too laudatory terms to meet the approval of those who were present. The most diffiterms to meet the approval of cult part, Damon, was taken by Mr. Rasmus, and his conception of the charac-ter fully demonstrated that he is a cultured artist in any role he may assume. Mr. Harry Lonsdale was assigned the part of Phthias, and in tone and gesture he displayed rare dramatic talent. The pathetic episodes with Cleantha portrayed a fine delineation of character, and in the heavy scenes where he refuses pardon at the sacrifice of honor was true to the higher instincts of noble manhood and his acting was commendable Dianysius was assigned to Mr. N. J. Sinnott, and his commanding presence play of authority and revenge-chief elements of the character-on his countenance was equal to any profes-sional. As a gentleman in every day life there is no one who does not respect Mr. Sinnott; but he acts the part of tyrant so realistic that no one can see the drama and not feel like joining a revolution against the tyrant. Miss Minnie Michell as Cleantha was the personation of the loving betrothed of a noble man; constant in her affection and not willing that anything should separate her from him to whom she had pledged her heart's affection. This difficult part was well taken, and the expression of Miss Michell's face, the pathos of voice, and graceful ges-tures were a careful recital of those traits in woman which has elevated the other portion of the human race. Miss Rose Michell, as the wife of Damon, was a truthful picture of human character. The unwavering confidence, the pleasure at meeting and regret at parting, of the true wife and mother, were delineated in tones and gestures so realistic that they fur-nished, apparently, a panorama of the better and higher family life. Miss Rose has a facility of expression, quick adaptability to circumstances at the moment which accord to her a high degree of historionic talent. Lucullus, by Mr. John Hampshire, was a very neat piece of acting, and in the ter-rible scene with Damon, when he craves his mercy for killing his horse, could not be excelled anywhere. Phillistius, Damocles and Procles, aken by F. Menefee, H. H. Riddell and F. W. Wilson, are not heavy parts; but every element in the characters were carefully portrayed, and in a truly artistic and dramatic manner. Mr. W. A. Crossen as Pythias' servant and Daman's boy, little Miss Constance French, were worthy of men-tion, and the sedate senators and sol-

Dear Sirs—I have been a tobacco fiend for many years, and during the pust two years have smoked fifteen to twenty eiga a regularly every day. My whole nervous system became affected, until my physician told me I must give up the use of tobacco, for the time being, at least. I tries the so-call of "Receivare," "No-To-"so," and various other reme ies, but without success, until I acci estaily learned of your "Raco-Gure." Three weeks ago today I commence t using your proparation, and today I count grapped completely cured; I am in perfect health, and the horrible craving for tobacco, which every inveterate moker fully appreciates, has completely left me. I consider your "S.co-Curo" simply wonderful, and can fully recommend it.

Yours very truly,

C. W. Hornica.
