Should a national bank resort to the same kind of trickery, suggests the Washington dispatch, for the purpose of obtaining a fictitious balance sheet the governor would promptly close the doors of the concern. But why, then, should the treasury officials be allowed to conduct the finances of the nation in a way that would not be countenanced in a private or quasipublic institution?

No pretense was made that there was not money enough on hand to meet all matured obligations. There was,in fact, over $90,000,000 of available cash in the treasury, in addition to the gold reserve of $100,000,000. Why, then, was it considered necessary or advisable to make it appear in the annual statement that the deficit for the fiscal year was only about $42,000,000, whereas, in fact, it was over $50,000, 000? This is a question that will or should be asked in congress.

i Of course there is the explanation that the administration naturally desires to make as favorable a financial showing for the year as possible. A prominent Democratic contemporary takes this view of the matter, and asserts that Secretary Foster did the same thing toward the end of the Harrison administration. The answer is that there is no similarity in the conditions. During Harrison's term the public debt was largely reduced, and no attempt was made to maintain a useless surplus. When Cleveland was re-elected in November, 1892, and it was seen that congress would be Democratic in both branches, the country became panic-stricken. There was a prevalent fear that the free traders would attempt to carry out their threats to repeal the tarriff. Importations fell off at once, and before Cleveland was inaugurated, the treasury, which had been in a healthy condition during the whole of Harrison's term, became embarrassed. It is impossible that Secretary Foster did being, in order not to encroach upon

The recent practices of Secretary Carlisle, however, were altogether different. Ample funds were available, as already said. The object was not to economize for fear of a shortage in the available cash, but to force a fictitions balance.

Perhaps the party exigencies suggested had less to do with treasury juggling than certain other considerations. It will be the annual report of the secretary of treasury for the fiscal year just closed that will be laid before congress at the meeting in December. The question will arise whether the tariff and other fiscal legislation passed by the Fifty-third congress has produced or can produce sufficient revenue to meet necessary expenditures. The Republicans in the Fifty-fourth congress will contend, as they did in the Fifty-third, that the Democratic revenue bill is a lamentable failure. They will point to the deficit as proof.

The most probable explanation of Secretary Carlisle's disgraceful manipulation of the balance-sheet for the fiscial year lies in the evident desire of the administration and of the Democratic leaders to break the force of the inevitable criticism of the Wilson bill.

SHOOTING AFFRAY. Two Men Shot by an Intoxicated Carpen ter, Who Appeared to be Running a Muck.

Last Saturday night was an exciting time in the city, and as a result there were a bridge accident, a saloon row, in which two rowdies picked a quarrel with a peaceable gentleman, and a shooting affray. The victims of the latter were peaceable and respec-table citizens, and apparently were guilty of nothing to arouse the ani-mosity of the individual. As far as we can learn the facts are as follows: During the evening L. P. Ostlund and a carpenter named McDonald had a John Taylor dispute about wages; but the matter was apparently dropped, and the af-fair received no further consideration. At the time the argument was in pogress a man named Hagan took-part in it. and uttered his opinions freely. Early Sunday morning Ost-lund, Hagan, Fred Bronson and Rich-ard Palmer were sitting in Lemke's speak in very complimentary terms of the Great Wallace Shows.

chambers of the revolver before he stopped, and then walked away. During the melee Fred Bronson received a ball through the fleshy part of the right leg and Hagan was shot in the back. The greatest excitement prevailed at the time, and Dr. Hollister was summoned by telephone. He came immediately and found Hagan shot through the back, but the ball was deflected by a rib and did not enter deflected by a rib and did not enter any vital part of the bod;. Mr. Bron-son was hit in the fleshy part of the leg, the ball passing out without striking the bone. Both were taken to their residences, and the necessary surgical remedies applied. As soo as aware of the occurrence Sheri Driver came down town and found McDonald at the head of the stairs in he Columbia hotel and placed him under arrest. He was very much excited and clung to the sheriff fearing hat he would be mobbed; but he was lodged in jail without any attempt at violence being made. The Railroad.

Work is progressing on the Golden-dale and Lyle railroad, says the Golden-dale Republican, although a larger force of men could be used profitably. The first half mile will be graded by the end of the week, at a cost, according to the estimate of N. B. Brooks, of about $400. The first ten miles of the road run in a canyon and the grading is mostly dirt. There is very little rock work. It is estimated that the 10 miles 1 70 of canyon should not cost much more 1 70 than $800 a mile, that is judging from the cost of the half mile already built The remainder of the road is through open prairie and, at the rates indicated, should not cost more than $500 a

A Correction In our report of the shooting affray yesterday we stated that McDonald had a dispute with Mr. L. P. Ostlund. had a dispute with Mr. L. P. Ostlund. This was a mistake. The altercation was between Hagan and McDonald, and Ostlund was called to substantiate a statement that McDonald had worked for $1.50 a day, which Mr. Ostlund stated was not true according to his knowledge. He had paid him full wages, $3 a day. But this occurred some time before the shooting, and when McDonald entered the saloon he said few words and fired five shots in said few words and fired five shots in
