COAL.

Rich Deposit Found Within a Fe Miles of The Dalles, Which May be

The region in the vicinity of this city has been excited on the coal question for several years. Specimens of this fuel have been found near The Dalles at different times; but no well developed vein has been discovered yet. The editor of this paper has been imbued with the idea, more, or less, that this region, perhaps, might rival Pennsylvania or other states some day with its export of coal, together with its other natural resources. He has always been anxious for items in relation to deposits of this material, and, when Mr. Charles Schutz dropped into the requisition papers. He is now in the office yesterday with a sack containing what he said was as good coal Pennsylvania, he was very much excited. Schutz said the vein was well defined, sometimes a foot to three feet in diameter, was easily discerned and situated near Mosier with a good wagon road to and from the place, Mr. Schutz would not state whether it was authracite or bituminous, but said it burned well and had good heating qualities. There was an abundance of the material; in fact the woods around Mosier were full of it. The veins he said had a gownward and upward pitch ing to bring the coal to the surface. At this point our imagination began to roam the airy fields of fancy, and we pictured The Dalles as the Chicago of the northwest in a few years, with an open river to the sea, and enough of this fuel to supply the continent. The sack was held tight by Mr. opened it to verify every statement he had made, and there we beheld as fine a specimen as ever was seen anywhere of—charcoal. Schutz: but after earnest entreaty he

Lester Goodenough, at Sprague Landing, Mr. Lester Goodenough, a son of the late Capt. Goodenough, who was a pilot on the Columbia river for a long time, died very suddenly last Wednesday morning at Sprague Landing on Wind River, about forty miles west of The Dalles. He had an eruption on his face, which he thought would de-velop into a boil, and his grandparents verop into a boil, and his grandparents tried to induce him to sleep at the house Tuesday night, instead of at the cabin about 200 yards distant; but he refused and said he would bathe his head in cold water to relieve him from headache, from which he had suffered to covered days. The young man was aged about 21 years, and was of such a genial disposition that he did not leave an enemy behind him. The remains were brought to the city on the boat last night, and this morning they were interred beside those of his father in the Catholic cemetery. His stepfather and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Nesler, Mr. J. H. Monahan, his uncle, and Chauncey his brother were the relatives pre-sent at the funeral. The grandparents were so prostrated by the shock that it was impossible for them to attend.

STABBING AFFRAY old Quarrel Between Tom Swift and Frank Sigerist Results in a Serious

The Fossil Journal of August 2 publishes the particulars of a stabbing affray at Winlock, about 25 miles from Fossil, in which Frank Sigerist was perhaps fatally stabbed by Tom Swift on the morning of that day. We quote on the morning of that day. We quote the following:

"The trouble appears to have been of long standing. On the 4th of July last at Wagner, young Swift accused Frank Sigerist of saying something uncomplimentary about himself and a young lady that Swift had at the time along with him. A few hot words passed only, as Frank did not care to quarrel in presence of the lady. This morning was the first time since then that the parties have met. that the parties have met. "Sigerist was working logging at Howell's mill, when Swift rode along on horseback. The old question came up; who started it, we did not learn. We only learned that hard words passed, and Frank called Emerson Howell over from his house to verify the statement that he (Sigerist) had made; and that, after threatening to blow the top of his head off, Swift suddenly drew a knife and stabbed Sigerist near the region of the heart. Sig-erist's arm was raised at the time. He had caught hold of Swift's wrist when Swift put his hand in his pocket as if to draw a pistol. As Swift brought his hand forth empty, Sigerist let loose of his wrist, and before he could lower his arm, Swift suddenly drew the knife already open, from a pocket in his 'chaps' and made a savage drive at Frank with it immediately after which he galloped off. Swift was on horseback and Sigerist on the ground when the stabbing was done. Constable Morgan took the knife, which Swift calls a 'jack-knife,' from the latter when he arrested him in town. It is a 'cattle' knife, having a spring back, which holds the 3½ inch dirk shaped blade fast when once opened." Swift rode into Fossil in company with Frank Howell and Dr. Howard was called to attend to the injured Mr. Howell reported that Sigerist had fainted once before he had left, but at that time they did not know how badly he was hurt. The wounde told him not to kill a horse going for the doctor. Dr. Howard returned from Wagner that evening and reports the wound a very serious one, with danger of its resulting fatally. Siger-ist was without coat or vest when stabbed, and the knife went into his side between the fourth and fifth ribs, barely missing the heart. The surface wound is three inches long. Very lit tle blood flowed externally.

DUFUR NOTES.

Items and News From Our Neighboring Town. DUFUR, Aug 3, 1895.

Your Dufur correspondents are s rregular that our place is not heard rom at times for long intervals. The probabilities are that this can be ac counted for by the fact that there are several of them, and that one waits upon the other. The farmers are now busy harvest-ing, and from most of them we hear the good news that the crop is about an average one. Some fields of grain are very fine and some are almost Our worthy postmaster, Mr. D. Thomas, is very sick. His chances for recovery are few indeed. Dufur needs stirring up in the way f building; more houses are needed of building; more houses are needed even in midsummer for the accommodation of those who desire to live here. The town is also sadly in need of a new school house, in order that the last two winters the house now used for school purposes has been filled to overflowing, and for the coming winter its accommodations will be entirely inadequate. The thing to do is eith build an addition to the present house, or to build a new house on other grounds and dispose of the one now in

There is something of a flurry among the dog fanciers of Dufur. No small town in Oregon can muster so many fine well-bred dogs, and we might add, nor so well trained. Mr. Neal, a quiet citizen of our town, without any spirit of rivalry took pity on what was considered a common cur, and to save it from the common fate of worthless puppies-drowning-took it home with him. Time has developed this dog, and the development is a marvel that has caused Balch and Anderson to turn green with jealous envy.

No doubt many citizens of The Dalles and of Wasco county, who were at the great show, have wondered what caused the elephant to act so furious when in The Dalles. The secret is told in a few words: Neal was there with his dog which no sooner smelled in full chase.

AN INDEPENDENT LINE.

A Portage Railway and Steamer Line Under a Pendleton date line, Spokesman Review of the issue of Aug. 5 contains the following relating to the visit of Major McNeill to the W. & C. R. proprieties and the trip made over the lines by him and President Tyler and vice-President Wilcox: "Paul Mohr, who is deeply inter-ested in the portage railway scheme at Cellic, on the Columbia river; ex-Governor Miles C. Moore and Tyler, the receiver of the Washington & Columbia River railroad, have been holding frequent conferences of late. It has been stated, though with no known autority, that a scheme was on foot to connect the Washington & Columbia River railroad with the Columbia river by building an extension on the road, and in cannection with Mr.
Mohr's portage railway at Celilo and a system of river steamers an independent line could be established for traffic in Washington and Oregon.

He Confesses to Killing Conles But Says It Was In Self-Defense. A. J. Symes, who killed Lew Conlec at Sprague, has at last been captured, and to a representative of the press he has confessed his guilt Symes has been working for a farmer near Missouls, Montana, and part of the time was herding sheep. He was thought by the farmer to resemble the picture sent out by the authorities for the capafter being made a deputy sheriff for that purpose. McClay, the farmer, went home to where the herder, who gave his name as Frank Davis, was at work, and asked him to go the ranch and get a team. Symes became suspi-cious and refused to go. He was well armed and so McClay sat down and picked up a piece of scantling and commenced whittling it. The report received here of the accilental wounding of the boy above Pilot Rock, it now appears, contained but part of the facts, says the Pendleton Tribune. Later news from Pilot Rock is to the effect that M. B. Scott, who resides on the east fork of Birch Rock, about eight miles above Pilot Rock, was out hunting with his 10-year-old son Stewart. The boy was on horseback and the father, who was on foot, attempted to hand him the rifle to carry, but in doing so the weapon was in some way discharged, the bullet tearing its way through the boy's face, and, it is believed, severing the jugu-lar vein. At any rate the wound was of such a character that before a surgeon could be summoned from Pilot Rock the lad was dead. This was on Sunday, and the funeral took place on

A Unique Cane. Mr. T. J. Driver, in his recent visit to Walla Walla, received a present from one of the wardens in the peniartistic canes that we have ever seen. It is made from cattle hoofs and horns, and these have been cut in small circles so as to closely follow each other that the dividing line can hardly be discerned. In the center is a steel rod, and this adds firmness to the stick. The pieces of hoofs and horns are so skilfully matched that they form a perfect mosaic, and the cane is truly a work of art. Mr. Driver values the cane very highly; but if he ever becomes tired of life, and desires to be remembered by a forlorn and perse-cuted member of the editorial profession be can will that cane to the author of these lines, and we will assure his widow and orphans that he will have an obituary notice of which Jack the Ripper or the Klan of Afghanistan would feel proud.

This smoky weather on the Columbia is a great hardship on navigators. In foggy weather, where the shore cannot be discerned, the pilot depends upon the echo from the whistle; but smoke in the atmosphere will not allow the sound waves to act, and, in making landings reliance has to be placed on conjectures where the land lies. For this reason it is somewhat dangerous to stop at way points where there are no lights or other objects to guide the man at the wheel. During the past few days the smoke has been quite dense, but not as bad as in former years; and no accidents have been chronicled thus far. With a careful, skillful captain, such as now command our river craft, the people may rest satisfied that accidents of all kinds will

Man Shot in the Arm, and Walks to th Locks, a Distance of Seventy Miles. We are informed that Mr. Mozar and a companion arrived at the Locks resterday from a hunt in the mountins, and that Mozart was in a terribl wounded condition. It appears that when about seventy miles from the Cascades the revolver carried by Mr. Mozart's comrade was accidentally discharged, the ball passing through the fleshy part of Mozart's arm. The man becoming alarmed, left his horse and ran to Mozart to attend to the wound. When he did all he could to relieve his sufferings he found that both ani mals had escaped into the fastnesses o the mountains, and, after fruitless endeavors, it was impossible to recapture them. In this condition they were forced to walk to the Locks, and, al though the accident happened Sunday it was yesterday about 10 o'clock be fore they arrived at the Cascades. Harper's Weekly.

HARPER'S WEEKLY is a picto-ial history of the times. It presents every important event promptly, accurately, and exhaustively! illustration and descriptive text of the highest order.

The manner in which, during 1894, it has treated the Chicago Railway Strikes and the Chica Japanese War, and the amount of light it was able to throw on Korea the instant at enton was directed to that little-known country, are examples of its almost boundless resources. Julian Raiph, the distinguished writer and correspondent, has been sent to the seat of war, and there iolined by 0. D. Wei don, the well-known American artist, now for many years resident in Japan, who has been engaged to co-operate with Mr. Raiph in sending to HARPER'S WEKKLY exclusive information and illustration. During 1895 every vital question will be discussed with vigor and without prejudice in the editorial columns, and also in special articles by the highest authorities in each department. Portraits of the men and women who are maning history, and powerful and coustic positical cartoons, will continue to be characteristic features. This Busy World, with its keen and kindly comment on the lesser doings of the day, will remain a regular department.

Fiction. There will be two powerful serials, both handsomely i justrated—The field Cockode, a stirring romance of olden days by stanley J. Weyman, and a navel of ew York, entitled the son of His Father, by Brander Mathews—several noveletics, and massy short stories by Popular writers
