A PRODIGY.

The following clipping, rich with truth, from a valley exchange is well worth publication for the benefit of our

Eastern Oregon readers: There was in attendance at the grand lodge of Workmen held in Portland last month, a certain young editor, full of self-importance, whose egotistical style, guilded with ignorance, attracted more than passing notice. Especially was this noticeable on the excursion down the Columbia river. Vhile gazing at the many sights in and, he chanced to learn of the al of a young lady, who has very filled the position of city editor on one of the Eastern Oregon dailies during the past year: Knowing that she belonged to the press of that section of the state, he thought of course she knew of him and his ability. He at once sought her out and addressing her said: "This is Miss---, of the Pendleton Tribune, I believe?" The lady assured him that she was the identical person, when he hastened to assure her that she must certainly know him. "Why," said he, "I am the editor and proprietor of the Antelope Herald. I started the paper a few years ago, in fact before 21 years of age, and I am yet the youngest editor in Oregon. My field is small, but then with my ability, I find constant employment. Yes, I am a violinist, the leader of the orchestra and play for all the dances for miles around Antelope. Do this for pleasure, pastime, you know. I am also quite an athlete, very fond of baseball. I organized the first team my town ever had. Am also quite a footracer. Wore the championship belt of that vicinity for a long I belong to the Workmen odge. Have held every office in my lodge, and have temporarily led a grand lodge position formerly supied by Senator Dolph. I am justice of the peace and U. S. commissioner. Deal out justice and look after all the final proofs on land in southern Wasco. I am married and have two the lady reporter at this instant, who was by this time almost speechless. And had it not been for the interruption this versatile parasite would probably still be lauding himself. We have often heard of the prolific clime and productive soil of Eastern Oregon, but hardly thought it capable of producing such a curiosity as this "I am"

Ordinarily the Gazette would stand ip in defense of any brother journalt when assailed in this manner, and would be very slow to believe such a nents and insulting articles published by this gentlemanly (?) editor we are not surprised at the above, in fact are inclined to belive the incident really happened.-Heppner Gazette.
