Mr. Wickham has been experiment ing in growing hops on the high table lands of Wasco county for several years. He is an old hop grower having followed the business in New York and understands it thoroughly. In speaking of the results of his experiment he says: "I find them as prolific and of as fine a quality as ever saw grown anywhere, and I also find them equally prolific on the high lands and bottoms. I would say that with proper care and cultivation the high lands of Wasco county could be made a source of profit by planting them to hops.

To Argue the Case

John M. Gearin has gone to San Francisco to argue the case of Receiver Beall, of the Linn Coudty National bank, vs. Cowan and others, which was decided some time since by Judge Bellinger and which has been appealed to the circuit court of appeals, and comes up for hearing on October 24. Oregon Industrial Exposition. She Judge Bellinger decided that the assets of the bank should not all be received by the attaching creditors. but should be divided equally among all the creditors. The attaching creditors appealed from this decision, and Mr. Gearin appears as counsel for them. It is thought that the assets of the bank would pay nearly all the claims of the attaching creditors, but only a small per cent of all the claims.

The underground Bokharan city i about two versts long and is composed of an enormous labyrinth of corridors, streets and squares, surrounded by ouses and other buildings two or three stories high. The edifices contain all train. I did not discover my mistake kinds of domestic utensils, pots, urns, vases and so forth. In some of the streets falls of earth and rock have obstructed the passages, but generally the visitor can walk about freely without lowering his head. The high degree of civilization attained by the inhabitants of the city is shown by the fact that they built in several stories, by the symmetry of the streets and square, and by the beauty of the clay and metal utensils and of the ornaments and coins.

> WOMEN SAILING SHIPS. triking Illustrations of Their Capabili ties in the Seafaring Line. It is not often that a ship has been in charge of a woman. The wife of the captain of the Jefferson Borden took her husband's watch occasionally when the vessel was short handed after the mutiny and murder of the officers. In 1869 the ship Denmark was brought into port by the captain's wife, the captain himself being laid up and in capable of doing anything except give advice. Another striking illustration of woman's capabilities in the seafar-ing line is afforded by the case of the bark Rebecca Crowell, which left New York for Buenos Ayres, but became disabled during a severe gale three days after leaving. Several of the spars and sails were carried away, and the captain and first mate were injured to such an extent that they were con fined to their berths the rest of the

There was no other person on board who understood navigation except the captain's wife, and she undertook the task of conducting the bark to the point of destination. The second mate was a young man twenty years old, able to take the helm, but ignorant of the process of making observations. The captain's wife, therefore, as sumed the command of the vessel, took observations, calculated the latitude and longitude regularly, maintained her place on the poop, and directed the course of the vessel. After exercising control for fifty-eight days, during which the vessel encountered violent gales and shipped heavy seas, she conducted the vessel, with its valuable cargo, safely into the port of Buenos Ayres.
