Mr. John Brookhouse returned this morning from Spokane, where he had been attending the funeral of his daughter, Mrs. Hagan. Mr. Brookhouse was not favorably impressed with Spokane or the surrounding country. He thinks the city has far outgrown its resources, the country back of it not being able to support so large a place. The soil he says does not compare favorably with that of this country, nor do the farms or farm improvements. Since visiting that portion of Washington, Mr. Brookhouse is convinced that The Dalles and Wasco county have many resources that are superior to those of the more pretentious places to the north and
