BIRTHDAL PARTY. Miss Florence Hollister Celebrates He

Sixth Birthday. The first May party of the season was celebrated Friday afternoon at the residence of Dr. O. C Hollister. The ooccasion commemorated the birthday of little Florence, over whose sunny head just six summers have passed. Very quaint looked the little guests as they arrived with their Dolly Varden bats, lace bonnets and Tam O'Shanters, and then the disrobing. Like humming birds pruning their wings the little fairies shook out their dainty dresses. One little sweetheart, the hostess, wore her bonny brown hair in a Grecian knot adorned with pink ribbons. Her cream colored cashmere fell from the dainty puffed voke in graceful folds, red, brown, blue and white were the prevailing colors worn. Only wings were needed to transform them into veritable angels. and we wonder if beyond the pearly gates more fair or lovely could exist. Surely sweeter laughter never was heard; sunnier faces never were seen for grace and harmony pervaded every movement of the bright happy children. The supper table was ar tistically arranged with a center piece of smilax brightened with pink roses and flanked with two exquisite vases. holding white lilacs and pansies. Six pink candles illuminated the birth day cake, while handpainted bon-bon boxes tied with pink ribbon and filled with choice candy was placed before
