The Weldler Mill Burned Causing of $150,000

The entire plant of the Willamette Steam Mill, Lumbering & Manufacturing Company, better known as Weidler's mill, was destroyed by fire Friday afternoon. The loss is approximately $150,000, and is covered by insurance to the amount of $40,000, distributed in small policies among several local agents. The origin of the fire was accidental, and owing to the extremely dry condition of the mill and yard, its spread was so rapid that nothing could be saved. Robert Mays an employe of the mill has not been seen since the fire started, and it is believed by his fellow-workmen that he was overcome while endeavoring to make his escape and has been burned to death.

At 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon Joseph Kane, an operative working on the second or main floor of the sawmill building, discovered a small flame which had burned a hole through the floor directly over a small saw technically known as the "pony." Kane raised an alarm of fire, and running to the alarm box on the premises-box 43-he turned in an alarm, while a companion blew a small steam whistle in the mill, which is the signal to shut down. Ten minutes after the alarm was turned in, and before the big engines could be brought to a standstill, the flames had burst through the roof of the frame sawmill building, rossed and caught the large frame sash and door factory 20 feet west of it and, running along the passage which protects the rope transmission connecting the eng ne with the mill, had tilled the metal-sheathed engine-room and forced the engineer and fireman to leave the engines and run for their lives. The mill, together with the entire stock of lumber, was a total loss. The fire was under control at 5:30, after burning two bours. The mill was built in 1872, and had done a without singeing a hair. Dwelling House Burned. A large house belonging to C: A east of the race track, was burned some time between 1 and 3 o'clock this morning. The fire was not discovered until the house was entirely consumed and had it been the building could not have been saved, as it was out of reach of the water supply. The building had not been occupied since last Friday. when the two families who had form erly lived in it moved out, and as ther had been no fires in the building since that time, the fire was evidently of incendiary origin. The building was valued at $1400, and was insured in the German-American for $1000.

Electric Bitters is a medicine suited or any season, but perhaps more generally needed, when the languid ex nausted feeling prevails, when the liver is torpid and sluggish and the need of a tonic and alterative is felt. A prompt use of this medicine has often averted long and perhaps fatal bilicus fevers. No medicine will act more surely in counteracting and freeing the system from the malarial poison. Headache, indigestion, constipation, dizziness yield to Electric Bitters. 50c, and $1.00 per bottle at Blakeley & Houghton's drug store.
