Airship. SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 14 .- Dr. C. A. Smith, is more enthusiastic than ever over his flying machine since he rewas incorporated in this city last Satcompany is M. M. Estee.

These well-known men declare that Smith's machine appears feasible as a mechanical proposition, and that it is really a most ingenious solution of the difficult problem that have faced the scientific aeronaut. Smith himself claims it will lift itself and additional weight, and more than that he can so control its flight as to practically imitate a bird on the wing. This means that the virship can be lifted from the earth and depressed at the will of the engineer, who may also steer his vessel hither and thither, describe circles regardless of the wind, and perform volutions like a ship at sea.
