Without them our railroads would have no traffic, our merchants no customers, our bankers no clients, our manufacturers neither raw material to manufacture, nor consumers of their products. Therefore, since the life of all industries depends upon them, if the fostering care of the government should be extended to any class it is the farmers. But, with the exception of the wool farmer, they have received the least favors from legislation in the McComant. past. They have been taxed to build up manufacturers and transportation lines, to maintain the army and navy, to pay the running expenses of government, but little indeed have they received in return.

Now when they ask for a change in the monetary system of the country which they believe will be beneficial to their interests, in that it will enhance the value of their products, they are confronted by the money lenders, the manufacturers and the transportation companies with the charge that they are "repudiators .and traitors." In this we believe the favored classes are unwise.
