MONOMETALIC BUGBEARS. In his speech at Salem last Saturday, ex-Governor Pennover completely an swered many of the calamity howls of the gold-standard press and refuted their claim that the free coinage of silver would result in wide spread disaster. On the question of their bugbears, he said:

"A few years ago many persons who had learned the lessons taught by history, and who, reasoning from cause to effect, foretold the disaster that would befall the country by a continued refusal to restore silver as a standard money, were denominated by the plu tocratic press of the country, which invariably sneezes whenever the bankers take snuff as "calamity howlers." The tables are now turned, and now the bankers and their papers have become the very worst kind of 'calamity howlers.' They prognosticate all manner of evil from the restoration of silver as money. They declare that it will drive gold all out of the country. That purpose, and the result was the Wasco is just what they prophesied when the Bland law was passed eighteen years ago, and they now ignore the fact that rom 1878 to 1890, while that law was in operation, the treasury reports show that the imports of gold exceeded the exports by two hundred and twentymillion, and that the stock of gold increased in this country over $450,000,-

"Another bugbear is that foreign nations will flood our country with was a demand for cheaper freight and silver. There is no danger. All the nations desire more silver, and would very much like it if we would continue that they might continue to purchase in The Dalles. Again came a demand its real value as money. Another bugin the interest of the silver mine owner, and would benefit him. Its When the residents of the city have onetization is in the interest of the thus displayed their public spirit and gold mine owner and why should he be benefitted any more than the silver mine owner. Both gold and silver are mine owner. "Another misstatement of the monometallists is that the present higher value of the United States dollar over the Mexican dollar lies in th fact that our dollar is redeemable in gold, while the Mexican dollar is not. That is not true. From 1878 to October 14, 1891, no one even for one moment supposed that the United States treas- as to everything except gold and men ury would ever be foolish enough to re- who are today aving for their homes em silver certificates or the treasur notes in gold and yet during that | very much harder to meet the obligapericd, the same as since, their intions." The old trade dollar that gold will go to a premium, if of the republican orators to swamp of 420 grains, not a legal tender, sold prices rise gradually as to everything themselves in their own logic. They except gold, is not the contention that at a discount at from five to tifteen per debtors will find it harder to meet cent, while the present standard dollar of 412; grains stands about at par, and the obligations fallacious? If gold goes out from under some of their strongwould forever stand fully at par if it to a premium will the advance be any est argument. Even the brainy Tom was made a full legal tender, which it more rapid than will be the rise in the Reed has found some difficulty in is not now, as the law gives the banker price of commodities? silver, according to our gold friends' theory it would be thrown upon us with one great slump. But will it actually come over here to be coined? Let us examine this proposition from a business standpoint. The $1,100,000,000 of silver in Europe is in active circulation in those countries, and is required as subsidiary coin to facilitate the ordinary exchanges in business transactions. Its coinage ratio to gold is 151 to 1. Not an ounce of it can be bought at less than its coin value. To transport and coin it here at 16 to 1 would entail a loss of something like $35,000,000. Very few of our gold friends would the coast. Let us look backward and undertake the job, however much they would want to see their theory verified

But suppose they should, how would they supply the vacuum caused in the circulating medium of Europe by its deportation? Silver cannot be found elsewhere to take its place, so the dump over here would have to be robbed and then up would go the price of silver. If their theory is correct, we would like to ask why it is that our neighbor to the south has not been the dumping ground for the silver of the world. Mexico is a monometalic silver country and has been for years. Why has not Europe been dumping her silver into that country and having it coined into passenger rates between this place and bright, shining Mexican dollars? Has the silver of that continent or of the United States amothered the Mexicans our present financial policy in order the capital stock was subscribed since free coinage has prevailed there?
