NEW YORK, Dat. 25,-A special from Key West to the World says: Steamship pa-sengers saylthat General Rivera, who is in command of the army of Macco, has sent a formal warning to General Weyler. General Rivera notified the Spanish captaingeneral that if he persisted in his threats to kill pacificas found in the country, the Cabans will make reprisals on all Spaniards whom they may capture. General Weyler is affecting to disregard the warning. Those near him, however, say he will not dare to carry out his ideas as ruthlessly as he intended. His guerillas still have full authority to capture or to kill pacificos in the country and to force their families into the garrisoned towns. As the troops in such places have little extra food and the residents none to spare, this order lays a great hardship upon the poor country folk. Hundreds will soon be starving.

General Rivera is moving out of his eatrenchments. All indications point to an important engagement soon. General Weyler has visited various points on the trocha and San Christobal. He is always accompanied by a > or three. A minister of Queen Christina says that highly respectable and respec ted royal lady is an inveterate and a veteran smoker. She got in the habit of smoking a cigarette when she was abbess of the Hradschin, a sinecure she lost on getting married. Her cousin, Archduchess Mathilde, who was engaged to King Humbert when he was prince of Savoy, lost her life owing to her fondness for cigarettes. She was forbidden by her father, Archduke Albert, to smoke, but none the less on doing so. One summer's day, ning, as she was standing smoking on the balcony she saw him enter the courtyard on which she was looking down. The archduchess, who was wearing a muslin dress, whipped the cigarette out of her mouth and hid it behind her back. It came in contact with the muslin, and she was in a moment enveloped in flames, there being boards were unmolested, with the exa strong draught where she stood. Most of the Russian grand duchesses are smokers. Grand Duchess Wlademir thinks a husband and wife who smoke are less likely to fall out than if the former alone smoked. It is not known whether the queen of Italy smokes, but some of her ladies cer tainly do. When I was at Stresa I saw them enjoying cigarettes when boating on the lake, and in the grounds of the duchess of Genoa's villa, where the queen was staying. The crown princess of Saxe-Meiningen could not live without her cigarette. It neither takes from her good looks, nor spolls her teeth, nor diminishes her activity. scarcely twenty-six. The Infanta Eulalia spoke when she was last on the Riviera of the comtesse de Paris as having set her an example as a smoker. As the French say, the infanta a beaucoup d'imagination, and saw in the cigarette or cigar of the comtesse a pipe which she believed that royal lady oked in the streets of Seville. Spanish ladies are gratuitously credited or discredited with being great smokers. They may do so in Cuba, though they are there more conservative and greater sticklers for the proprieties than at Madrid. The ladies who best patronize tobacconists are, next to the Kalmucks, the Russians. The ruling passions Kalmuck women are ribbons to twist round their long tresses, tea, tobacco and bright handkerchiefs. But if they have to choose between tobacco and tea their option is for the former. When a little Kalmuck comes into the world-an event that happens rarely twice in the same menage, the mamma is given a well-filled pipe to smoke before she nurses the baby. The little one takes to smoking before it is weaned. The pipe is the great cure for nervous headache. Fredensborg, where the czar and czarina summer, is the dullest place in the world. The queen of Denmark is exacting of respect for the proprieties. The last charge that anyone could think of bringing against her court is that of fast behavior. Yet most of the young and youngish ladies there are smokers. There is no better way of showing off pretty hands and rings than toying with a cigarette. A court party from Fredensborg one evening was dining at the Copenhagen Trivoli in the colonnade of the restaurant. There was a large threatrical party near them; the actresses did not smoke, but the ladies in attendance and those whom they attended did. Some of the fair smokers were Russians, and not in the least inclined to unfurl the flag of revolt. That evening it was learned that the crown princess of Saxe-Meiningen is not the only granddaughter of Queen Victoria who finds a solace in the cigarette. Why should not a ises the pipe to take the edge off nervousness? The only harm is in the abuse. But there is no good thing under the sun that is not mischievous if taken in excess. There is no mor harm in mild smoking than in mild tea drinking. George Sand, who lived to the age of seventy-three and was so active and hard-working to the end, smoked eigarettes and cigars—and in excess. The for entrance. smoke curling before her eyes roused up her imagination. Victor Hugo

HAIL FORMED BY TORNADOES. The Besult of Whirlwinds in the Atmos

Nevertheless some points are pretty clearly established. In the first place, hail is the result,

A curious indication of the soundness of this conclusion was to be noted the other afternoon, when the storm which wrought such havoe with skylights had passed by. ### HOOKED A BEE MARTEN. He Was Fishing for Trout, But Got a Bite of Another Sort. "A strange thing happened to me when I was trout fishing last year up in northern New York," said Andrew Bishop, of Bridgeport, Conn., to a Hedrick, of the State Agricultural Col-Washington Star man. "The fish were very wary, the stream was narrow, and the pools were but lightly bordered ply. with bushes or cover of any kind, consequently when I would reach a promising looking spot I would get as far from the bank as possible, and at the same time be able to drop my fly over in the water. I had followed this plan with poor success, getting only one or two strikes in as many hours, when suddenly my line began to run out with a whirr. No trout had ever carried off a sugar very largely, just as when a fly for me in such a way before, and I potato freezes it becomes sweet through that it was not a fish that was making my reel sing. Rising from the surface of the stream and flying above it was a bee marten which had gobbled my fly opinion that whenever you find the as I cast it over the bank, and he was discolored wood, as shown in the making away with it. The bird soon specimens you sent, that there will be had nearly all my line out, and not "sour sap" in the spring because of the earing to lose it. I began to play him as I would play a fish. Snipes & Kinersly Drug Co. FRUIT-GROWERS AND DAIRYMEN

Agricultural College. Fruit-growers and dairymen should all examine the four week's special course to be given by the Oregon Agricultural College, beginning January 11, 1897. It is to consist of lectures on the various phases of horticulture, botany, entomology, chemistry, and dairying, especially prepared for practical men in these lines. The college laboratories, libraries and scientific apparatus, including an electric stereopticon for illustrations, will be used in connection with this course. Insect life, fungus d'seases, that cannot be seen with the eye, will be magnified two or three thousand times so that their nature and character will be plainly revealed. Several specialists in horticulture and dairying will deliver evening lectures. Such men as M. O. Lownsdale, A. H. Carson, Chas. Dailey, Dr. James Withycombe, and others, will aid the college with lecture work and make the course of great value to the practical people. The course is designed for men and women who can leave their farms and homes, only a short time and is planned upon a thoroughly practical basis. No charge whatever will be made for the course and no examination or educational qualifications will be required

Farmers, farmers' wives, sons and daughters, ought to take advantage of this course. By this course they can become thoroughly familiar with modern thought, scientific investigation, and practical application of the same. There is a complete working dairy at the college in daily operation, and all of those attending will have the advantage of the practical work of the operation of modern dairy machinery, including the running of the engine. All persons attending the course are requested to bring with them specimens of insecst pests or diseases of any kind affecting their orchards, for examination.

Reduced rates will be given over the D. P. & A. N. and O. R. & N. lines to parties attending the course. For particulars write to the president of the H. B. MILLER.

CONDITION OF FRUIT TREES. Were Damaged by the Free

The statement that the fruit trees were not materially injured by the recent cold weather was not in accord with my observations. Upon examination of my trees I concluded the wood cells were injured, and sent samples of cutting from Petit and Italian prunes to Professor U. P. lege, and received the following in re-G. E. SANDERS.

Your letter and samples came yesterday and I hasten to reply. A microscope examination shows that the cells of the wood have been badly ruptured, caused by the water in the cells expanding as it froze.

Chemical tests show that the starchy matter in the cells has turned into

Just how these injuries will effect the trees I cannot say. I am of the fermentation of the sugar that should I tell you, but the hook had caught in be starch. The injured cells willign his beak and held him firmly. At last, badly and you will probably after a full hour of fighting, the bird much "gummosis." The tree fluttered helplessly to the ground, and I released him. You may think that's sult of the injury.
