ESCAPADE OF A DALLES GIEL She Outwits a Portland Merchant-Ge

Goods on Forged Orders. Beulah Gilgard, who was sent fron The Dalles to the Boy's and Girls' Aid Society at Portland about two years ago, has developed into an expert forger, and is causing Sunt. Gardner no end of trouble. The Telegram gives the following account of some of her escapades: Some of her latest exploits have been daring enough to land the 15-year-old incorrigible in the penitentiary if any person cared to prosecute her. The girl is too young to be dealt with by the law, but she has now been incarcerated at the Magdalen Home, on the East Side, where the course of discipline is expected to correct her traits.

The principal trouble with Beulah is peculiar foodness of getting into mischievous scrapes of one kind or another. This has led her to become forger with such success that she has obtained goods from various stores on written orders made out by herself. The ludicrous part of it is that the girl does not realize that it is a very great harm, or that it is dangerous. The little forger is certainly an adept. She forged an order upon her mistress at a house where she was staying for her release, and obtained her freedom. Before she was found, Superintendent Gardner, of the Boys' and Girl's Aid Society, was put to great trouble and some expense to locate the wayward Beulah wrote out an order on the house referred to, instructing them to let the bearer have all the clothes she wanted, and the bill would be paid during the week. The Three Dog System.

A man up in Umatilla county hasn't lost a sheep from coyotes since adopting the three dog system of watchfulness. He keeps just three good hounds which can make a good run after the coyote and are not afraid to tackle them single handed. For two of the hounds he makes a comfortable and warm bed under a shed, and leaves them loose at night. The th'rd hound he ties to a post on the side of the corral farther from the sheds. The hound has to keep awake on account of the cold, and is on the alert for any coyotes which may come prowling around during the night. When the hound knows a covote has approached, he sounds the note of warning, and the two loose hounds rush out from the sheds and make for the coyotes. The hounds and allows the one which was out the night before to go under the shed. Since adopting this plan not one sheep has been killed by coyotes. Most people who read about this plan the owner ought to provide steam heat or an oil stove for the hound which has to stay out all night or be punished for | county, and was a candidate for recruelty to animals.

Possibly there months since, but there are other places where prosperity has not yet struck, and one of those places is Altoons, Pa. STORY OF A CAT.

Carried So Much Electricity That a Car The efficacy of a black cat as a lightning rod has been too frequently the subject of discussion and assertion to be treated at length at the present time, the drift of which is to show the apt manner in which an illustration of this popular belief can be deduced from an incident that occurred on the evening of the Fourth of July to the wife of a well-known business man of Washington.

On the evening in question the young natron had been expending conside able time and attention upon a handsome black cat, which she continued to stroke, notwithstanding the assertion of her family that by so doing she was charging herself with electricity. Finally after dark the young matro decided that a pleasant way of winding up the evening would be to go for a ride on the electric car to Bethesda. Accordingly, inviting two of her friends to accompany her, she set out for the ride in high spirits.

The trio found places together near the middle of the car, and had gone a short distance beyond the power house when their conversation was interrupted by the conductor hurriedly bending over them as though to avert some catastrophe beneath and telling them to leave the car with all speed as it was on fire. Scarcely had they left their seats before a sheet of flame burst through the floor just beneath the very spot over which the young matron had been sitting, the electrica apparatus beneath having ignited at hat very point.

Now they are pinching his feet, and his next ones must be No 13 and be made to order. Eddie is light complexioned, quiet, and as his father says, a good boy. He purposes some day to become a brickmason like his father. But this far in life he has spent his time in school. He has attended the Franklin building. where his tall, stalwart form is a familiar sight among the other children of his age and grade.

Under the above heading The Californian, published at Bakersfield, Kern county, Cal., in its issue of Jan. 21, says concerning the acquital of N. R. Packard, who was some 30 years ago county clerk of Wasco county: "The particular charge on which one indictment was found was for re-next night he puts out another of the taining certain fines collected from non-attending jurors. "The case came up today, and the accused man produced the treasurer's receipt for the money alleged to be missing, while examination of the will say it is tough on dogs, and that treasurer's books showed the proper entry of such payment." Mr. Packard was clerk of Kern election, and it seems that just prior to the November election the grand jury indicted him on a frivolous charge. This resulted in his defeat, but the Californian thinks it will work to his benefit two years hence. It says editor

Sherman County Without alSaloon Sherman county is again without a saloon. When an attempt was made recently to have a saloon, Miss Maggie Eaton, of the W. C. T. U., took her horses and carriage, and with another white-ribboner, drove 55 miles in one day, and opened 45 gates, and the next day, taking another woman, drove 45 miles and opened 30 gates; making 100 miles in two days, and the opening and closing of 75 gates. By doing this they found men employed upon their farms and secured a majority of signatures of the voters, and so saved the county from a saloon, says the Wasco News.
