MARTIAL LAW IS DECLARED. Government Adopts Drastic Measures in Bahm

NEW YORK, March 11.-The Herald's correspondent in Rio Janeiro telegraphs that martial law has been declared in the state of Bahia where Conseilheiro's fanatics are engaged in a serious rebellion. The government has dispatched General Santuzia to Bahia with a large force of artillery, the rebels in the last with the Barzilian troops having captured many of their guns. Within eight days the government will send 6000 infantry and cavalry reinforcements to Bahia.

The war department has received in ormation that the fanatics are nov more than 15,000 in number, and that their strength increases daily. Business in Bahia is completely paralyzed, and the government is much agitated at the prospect, especially since the disastrous defeat of the federal troops. It is stated that Colonel Tamarindo was not killed at Canudos, and that he is now in Montezanta.

ogs Used for the Chase by English Sovereigns and Nobles Greyhounds have existed in very much the same form as we find them to-day for more than three thousand years, as we find them pictured on Egyptian monuments of that remote period. The name probably came from heir general color in England when King Canute decreed that none but princes and nobles should keep them. The color now, in either smooth or rough coated greyhounds, is very seldom grey, but more often fawn, red, or fawn and blue), or black. The smooth coated dog is known as the English greyhound, and the rough conformation they are very much the same. They are the fastest run ners of any of the canine race. On level ground they can go as fast as a footed thoroughbred. Formerly the English dog was used in chasing the red and fallow deer, and it is related that on one occasion Queen Elizabeth been stronger than those now found in England.
