The window was supplied with a grating and with sage from the hall to the outside, while burglar-proof grating made it possible to leave the window open all night. The front door might readily be so arranged with a grating that it, too, ould be left open at night, and in all cases it should be supplied with an awn-

the same time, to afford shade to the visitor and tradesman who must wait there till the bell is answered. As soon as the sun has ceased to beat upon the house-either directly or by reflection-all these processes can be reversed. What is needed then is nir. which, however heated, is sure to los a degree or two of its temper as night comes on. All windows then should be thrown wide open and remain so until late, the upper stories, in fact, being left open until sunrise next morn-

To be healthful, the sleeping spartments should be the most rooms of the house; the furniture keepers make the mistake of excluding sunlight and air from the house order to keep it cool. Windows and NEW YORK, June 14 .- A dispatch to doors should be thrown open early in the morning, so as to freely admit sun Spanish troops are returning to shine and light, then they may be dle of the day, to be again thrown open in the cool of the evening. Management and method must be exermates,-Ladies' Home Companion.
