NEW YORK, Oct. 8 .- A dispatch to the ir ree from London says: The Jostish government's answer to the proposal of the United States and France for bimetalism by international agreement will probably be ready within a fortnight. Possibly it will be delivered earlier, as there is evidence that the ministry is disturbed by the prolongation of the controversy over the monetary question in the press and wishes to put an end to it.

Two months ago they were strongly disposed to make such concessions to the United States and France as would have enabled these powers to convoke a monetary conference. Sir Michael Hicks-Beach obtained from the governor of the bank of England a qualified assent to the conversion into silver of one-fifth of the reserve for the redenotion of note issues.

The Indian government was also consulted respecting the expediency of opening the mints to the free coinage of silver. If the answer to that proposition had been as favorable as the reply of the governor of the bank of Eagland on the minor point of a larger use of silver in the reserves, Senator Wolcott's mission would have been completely successful in opening manently. The Snipes Kinersly Drug Co. Senator Wolcott's mission would have the way for a new session of the conference. That answer has not yet been officially revealed, but it has been received in London, and is believed in diplomatic circles to be unfavorable to the reopening of the Inlian mints.

running their heads under a leaf and mind only their mother's directions given from a distance, nor will your approch make them run again and betray them selves. I have held them in my oper hand, and still their only care, obedien to their mother and their instinct, was to squat there without fear or trem once, when I laid them on the leaves again, and one accidentally fell on its side, it was found with the rest in exactly the same position ten minutes afterward. The remarkable adult, vet innocent, expression of their open and serene eyes is very memorable. All intelligence seems reflected in them. They suggest not merely the purity of infancy, but a wisdom clarified by experience. Such an eye was not born when the bird was, but is coeval with the sky it reflects. McGuire the other day, in making some observations about mad dogs, reports the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, "might be very well taken by peacocks and guinea fowls. I long since adopted pencocks alone to guard my place, and nothing can come around the premises night or day without causing an alarm from them. They are more watchful than any dog I ever owned. My experience with guineas has not been so ex tensive, but I believe they are also sure to give an alarm, or rather a good many alarms, if any strange man or beast should venture near them by night or day. Perhaps the days of the generally known how well peacocks and guinea fowls would take his place. Then, certainly, with fewer dogs there would not be so many cases of hydrephobia. The statement of Mr. McGuire as to the watchfulness of peacocks was borne out by numerous Howard county farmers, among the number being County Commissioners Hess, Dorsey and Smith, tends the farming operations of Senator Gorman. Mr. Hobbs stated that he long ago discovered what excellent protection peacocks afford about a place, and down on the senator's farm he al ways keeps six or eight of them to pencocks are useful as well as orna
