First Day of the Meeting Opened Under Unfavorable Conditions.

The weather for the opening day of the fair was unpropitious, a cold wind accompanied by occasional showers having prevailed all day, nevertheless there was a goodly attendance, people having braved the storm and turned out to enjoy the different sports.

At the pavilion, in the Vogt opera house, everything was confusion and oustle, keeping those in charge busily engaged arranging and entering exhibits, though toward evening order came out of confusion, and the exhibits were pretty well placed during the afternoon.

Owing to the inclement weather, the attendance at the fair grounds was not large, though the crowd was en thusiastic, and appreciated the attractions that were found on the ground-Only a few stock were exhibited though what is there is of the best
