Kelsay Porter Atones for His Crime With His Lafe. Union, Or., Nov. 19.-Kelsay Porwas hanged in this city this morning, according to the sentence passed upon him in October. The execution took place at 6:45 o'clock, on a scaffold that had been erected within the enclosure surround? ing the county jail. The governor had been petitioned to commute the sentence, but no word was received from him untill last night, when the sheriff received a message stating he could not interfere with the due course of the law, and the sheriff at once completed his arrangement for carrying out the order of the court. Thursday evening, Porter sent for Rev. Shields, of the First Presbyterian church, who called on the condemned nan, and gave him such spiritual adice as he could.

The crime for which Kelsay Porter paid the death penalty was perpetrated on the morning of January 1, 1896, at Porter's farm in the eastern part of Union county, and was the killing of an old man named Mache, his aged wife and their son, Ben Mache. There had been trouble between Porter and the Maches about the latter crossing nis farm. On the morning of the killing Porter had stationed himself on a shed beside his barn, armed with a repeating rifle. The Maches came by, the old folks riding in a sleigh and the boy following on horseback. Porter opened fire on Ben, killing him instantly, then followed the old folks up and killed both. Porter was tried in February, 1896, and sentenced to be hanged on April 10. His attorneys appealed to the supreme court, but the lower court was sustained, and on October 15th of this year, Porter was again sentenced, the date of execution being fixed for November 19. A large petit on was preented to the governor, asking the entence be commuted to life imprisnment but was refused.

THE GIDDY OYSTER. he Home Now Sold to Road Makers and Gas Works. The waters of Maryland produce onethird of the total oyster supply of the world. It yields twice as many of these luscious bivalves as are grown in all foreign countries combined. During the present century it has put on the market 400,000,000 bushels of the toothsome mollusks. These have sold for the enormous sum of $250,000,000. Almost all of this country is dependent for the sbundance and cheapness of this edible on the supply of the Chesapeake, From here also come very nearly all of the oysters used for canning. In fact, the output of this industry in Maryland is equal to one-sixth of all the fisheries of the United States put together.

The quantity of oyster shells landed upon the shores of Maryland during the last century has been reckoned at 12,000,000 tons. Until lately the canning firms have had much trouble in getting rid of the shells, having to pay, in fact, for the removal of all they could not give away. Recently, however, they have been able to sell them. They are now shipped to all parts of the country and are utilized variously for roads, for lime, and employed in making coal gas, They have also been found to serve almost as well as stone in the manufacture of special grades of iron for railway beds. Cultivators of oysters also employ them, having found that they afford suitable surfaces for young oysters to attach themselves to. They are likewise used to some extent as chicken food. They are very good for bens, the shells of eggs being largely made of them. The trade receives $25,000 in a single year for the empty

Starfishes are the oysters worst enemy. Other animals the young oysters have to guard against are crabs and boring snails. They are also in danger of being stifled by mud. In Pacific waters stringrays are their most dreaded foes. The little crab that lives in the shell of the oyster has always excited much interest. Usually the Only Thing That Will Make

This is a true story, and one that will apply to many other young men besides this particular one. It is a great pity that this is true, says the Pittsburgh Commerical Gazette, but so

A prosperous business man who employs quite a number of clerks said recently that he had been led to the conclusion that the young man who saved and invested his earnings is an exception to the rule. He was surprised to find this to be true. The facts came out when he began reducing his work ing force as business fell off. The first to be dropped were those who had no family depending upon them. Then Therefore he imposed the lowest pen it was that they would confess they alty, which is imprisonment for six hadn't saved a dollar, and had no means whatever upon which to live. This Sutton is a man of simple mind, and to him it seemed no harm would be done if he eked out the pittance of his office of postmaster by adding the sums paid in for purchase of money orders, a matter of some $355 when all was counted. He would make it good in his place, and at one time in every house own time, and in truth he thought it no wrong. Now, this was not a matter of walking downtown to give yourself up to the police or the marshal. It was not even a matter of boarding a comfortable railroad ceach, to be hauled into Portland. Oretown is a lonely camp buried miles and more from a railroad station. with raging rivers to be crossed between, and no road on which a horse may travel in this teeming winter season, when the whole countryside is soaked and sodden like a full sponge, deep with treacherous, unfathous seas of holding mud. Forty-three mi on foot, swimming and swirling, wild unbridled rivers, staggering along through clinging mud, unable to lie down and sleep in his drenched clothes lest he perish of the cold, deprived of fire and light, because the matches he carried were soaked; snatched a hungry bite by the way at the little store of food he had in his pockets, all sodden and smeared with mud-this was the task that Vincent Sutton set himself because justice must be done, and he must bear his part, though his life be forfeited in the doing. So it came that the simple-minded man of primitive mold sat down and wrote a letter to Marshal Gray, in Portland, that he would come himself to the nearest railway station on the railroad, Sheridan, and there surrender to an officer of the law-no need to send a man to bring him in from his distant home. Let the officer come to Sheridan by a certain day, and he would be there, He kept his word, albeit more than one it nearly cost him his life.

Sutton has a wife. He kissed he good-by and stuffed his pockets with the food which she, poor woman, had put up for him with loving care, enough to last him two days, it might be, on the way to Sheridan. The Three rivers. triple thunderer in sooth, was booming breast sweeping logs and jagged roots, torn from their sockets by the searching flood. Five times it had to be crossed by Sutton on his way, swimming or wading, or chancing his life on a treacherous log. Once he was nearly smothered in a bottomless pit of mud as dangerous as the quiet, remorseless suck of a quicksand that never gives up its dead. It was bitter cold, and he must keep afoot or perish. But there is iron in this man's blood. He had pledged his word, and he got there. Now, when this simple tale was told to Judge Bellinger, sitting in Portland as the representative of the federal law he, being a man, was troubled in mind for here was one who had set his life at the value of a pin fee, that the law might have its way, and yet fustice must be done and punishment meted as is set down in the books. Nevertheless there are degrees, and Judge Bellinger resolved that this was a case where it would not strain the quality of justice were it softened with mercy. months and a fine equal to the sum which Sutton appropriated.-San Fran cisco Examiner.

TRAVELS OF A DIAMOND, Story of a Paris Jeweler's Experience with a Very Fine Stone. Some years ago a Paris jeweler told a story of one diamond which had passed over his counter no less than 11 times. It was a beautiful stone of nearly four carats, of perfect color and luster, but easily identified by means of a small "feather" in the tip of the lowest part. He bought it from an East India dealer and had it set in a ring. It was sold to a countess in 1869, just before the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian war. The countess died in a few weeks, and the ring was worn by her husband. He was killed in the siege of Paris, and a few days after his death the ring was brought in the ring and sold it to the mon soldier. He was arrested, and the ring was sent to the family of the dead count. Before the siege ended they brought in the ding and sold it to the buy food. Directly after the siege in passed into the hands of an English tourist who visited the city, to get a look at the ruin wrought by the communists, and a year later back came the dealer in order to procure money to stone from the Indian buyer of the firm who, on being written to and desired tell how he got it, stated that it ! been the property of an English tou hunter who was killed by a tiger, his friends sold the ring to get mea send the body home. The stone w set, and soon found a purchaser prominent member of the demiwho not long afterward was murdered in her room. Among the articles taken by the murderer was the ring, and the firm began to wonder how soon it would turn up. They had not long to wait, for all their people had by this time learned about the stone, and were on the lookout for it. After six months it was found in the showcase of a jeweler in London who had bought i Amsterdam. It was bought by the Paris agent, and sent back to be started afresh on its travels. It was purchased again by a woman of the town, who, six weeks later, was drawn out of the Scile with the gem on her finger and, by a strange coincidence, it was offered to strange coincidence, it was offered to the firm that sold it by the police agents, the court having jurisdiction having ordered it to be sold. And so it went from hand to hand, attended with misfortune at every change and usually bringing death to the possessor 'Lasay that when a stone was baptized at blood when first taken from the bard it caused the shedding of blood when-ever it went, and the story of one
