A KNOTTY LAND CASE.

A case of land-jumping has occurred in the south end of Benton county, and the title to 198 acres of cultivated land, worth $4000 or $5000, is involved. The land lies three miles north of Monroe, and was purchased by Noah Starr from the school superintendent of Benton county March 27, 1860. The price paid was $1050. Star remained in undisputed possession of Whitman massacre. The lower boxes | the tract until 1882, when a flaw was discovered in his title, and a new deed to correct title was given him by the state board of school land commissioners. Fifteen years ago Starr died, and in his will the tract was given to M. C. Starr, a son, who reand behind them was a chorus of 60 mained in peaceful possession until Thanksgiving day. While the family was at breakfast that morning, attention was attracted by the call of some one in another room who said there was a house in the field. Investigation showed that the house had been erected on the premises during the night, and that William E. and Herner. Dr. Hallock was in sympathy manu Shinn, brothers, were the occupants. They claimed perfect title to the property. Starr ordered the brothers off the premises, but they refused to go. Starr then brought proceedings of forcible entry and detainer in a justice court at Monroe to oust them. The case was tried, and the verdict of the jury was that the Shinns are lawful owners of the land The claim of the Shinns to the land is based on an alleged flaw in Starr's title. At the hearing in the justice court, evidence was presented showing that in 1853, seven years before Starr bought the land, a man named Hunter had included the 198-acre tract | unawares .- N. Y. Other evidence adduced was to the effect that in 1854 lieu land had been selected for the 198 acres, and that therefore the tract at the time Starr bought it as school land was not school land at all. The Shinns also presented certificates from the Roseburg land office relative to their filings, which were made about the middle of October and on the 6th day of last month respectively. W. E. The harrowing news comes from London that a mosquito has been taken alive in Hertfordshire. A gentleman living at Barley, Royston, writes to a London paper that on a recent evening his bedchamber. An Englishman is always brave, and it seems almost superfluous to add that the man of Barley grappled with the creature single-handed, nor stayed his hand until it was under subjection. We ometimes read of such feats of derring doe even in these degenerated days. Next to vindicating his personal bravery, an Englishman's first duty is to write to his newspaper and tell about t. To this admirable national trait the readers of the Sunday Herald are indebted for the particulars herein set forth. The man of Barley had traveled n far countries. Among other places he had visited the famous city of New Jersey, and in the transmississippian capital had met and coped with the osquito in its lair. Thus he is able to identify his quarry and lay before the British public . harrowing picture of the animal's distinguishing traits. "The specimen caught," he writes, has every characteristic of the foreign mosquito, especially the New Jersey variety. I believe they have been brought to England with timber, which are usually carried down the rivers, have on them mosquito eggs gathered from the surface of the water, where they breed, and so in this manner are transported to Europe, where the sunshine batches them, and they fly away."

It now remains only to unite the English people as one man against the invader. Hence this suggestion: "Let every person carefully examine his bedroom window in the morning and kill them, as by so doing they would be prevented laying their eggs and reeding. Now is the time to act to prevent them spreading. They may asily be known by their resemblance to gnats, but having a long trunk or proboseis, and by making a humming noise when approaching the face or hands of a person." Accompanying this slogan is a dianess end of the mosquito, which may be used for further identification of the dreaded foe, should be be encountered

POWERFUL WAVES.

A correspondent of the Youth's Com panion recently witnessed a most con

A strong gale of wind was blowing over the lake and driving its surface into low, white-capped ridges, while along the shore the foam lay like flat banks of new-fallen snow. If it had passed across a lake of fresh water o equal extent that wind would unques ionably have produced such an agita tion of its surface that navigation ir if not highly perilous. But the waters of the Great Sali
