SIAM SAPPHIRE MINES. Talue of Their Product Is in the Quantity

The Pailin mines are spread over an area six miles by two, and consist of 13 mining villages, the chief of which are Baw Taka and Baw Dineo. These two are more than four miles apart, but they are joined by an excellent road cut through the forest and well drained Sapphires, says the London Times, are found all over this district; the whole countryside is riddled with holes sunk in the red soil down to the sapphire layer. Formerly the stones were found quite near the surface, but those places have long since been exhausted, although the Burmese still continue to turn over the old heaps in the firm conviction that precious stones grow. Now the stones are found at a depth of from 15 to 25 feet, in a reddish, gravelly layer of varying thickness up to 18 inches. The pit sunk is usually some five feet in diameter and either square or circular. Soil is raised in bamboo baskets, attached to the end of a balanced lever, and when the sapphire layer is reached the stratum is carried to the nearest water and washed carefully for stones. Not more than one shaft in three pays for its working expenses, but when the sapphire layer is struck the profits may be sarge indeed. It is all a question of luck. To dig and work out one shaft occupies two or three men evenings of picule and excursion days, one month. Two or three Burmese generally go into partnership and hire Laos miners to work for them and sink the shaft at the rate of two ticals (two shillings eight pence) per 18 inches. Occasionally sapphires of considerable value reward the miner, but the sap phires of Pailin are of more commercial

For 20 years or more the deepest spot in the ocean has been supposed to be to the northeast of Japan, says the New York Journal. There the bottom lies 4,655 fathoms down, or more than five miles beneath the surface of the waves. In the latest hydrographer's report of admiralty surveys, made by the British government, this ocean record, which has stood so long, is beaten, for there is The following delegates to the silver official information of a deeper sounding than has hitherto been made. The deepest spot in the ocean, so far as known at present, has been found to be in the neighborhood of the Friendly and Kermadee islands, in the Southern Pacific. Here the maximum depth is 5,155 fathoms, or close upon six miles, The observation, made by the officers on board the British ship Penguin, is all the more interesting for the fact that it bears out the result of previous re-Treavitt -- H. C. Jacobsen, James Harmon, M. A. Robinson, J. H. Bursearches, showing curiously enough as it does that the deepest parts of the sea are not far from land. Deep-sea sounding has come of late years an exact science in itself. One curious feature of it, and one which is little known, is that the "leads" used have to be constructed with especial strength in order to withstand the enormous pressure of the mass of water which bears down upon them when they lie upon the bottom. So great is this pressure that the sounding apparatus in ordinary use would be crushed.

SPARROWS IN TEXAS. Oriving Out the Mocking Birds and At-

The little English sparrow is becoming so numerous that there is considerable discussion about adopting methods of getting rid of the pest. They are here, says the Galveston News, by the thousands and are remarkable for their fecundity, as they lay from five to six eggs each sitting and raise three broods a year. They are no longer considered insectiverous, and owing to their pugnacious habits, making war upon the birds that are desired and destroying their eggs, as well as making themselves obnoxious in a great many ways, and with their rapidly increasing numbers, their extermination will be a matter of a serious nature here at an early date. Other towns are doubtless experies trouble with them, as the bird is mi gratory in pairs, settling only where there is habitation and springing into the thousands like a mushroom. A prominent citizen here who has a num ber of mocking birds in the trees and shrubbery in his yard, and who has time and again watched the onslaughts meeting the latest cut made by the of this vicious little bird with an inva-Northern routes. The fare from here | riable victory, states that it will be a question sooner or later of state legislation by offering a bounty for them. They were introduced into Australia about the same time as their introduction into the United States for the same purpose of destroying the tree caterpillar, and that country eventually had to use the bounty method to get rid of them.
