In the life of a modern business com munity a man must beware of too much wisdom, says the Chautauquan. The specialist is the man who succeeds and having once set his hand to an occupation one dare never leave it under penalty of failure in what he has chosen as his life work. In the west all this was different. Versitility was a necessity The successful man must know how to do many things. The gleanings of any one field of activity were too small to afford a living of themselves. This fact was accepted by the citizens of the country, sometimes with a grim humor

A young lawyer in a western town had out a sign which read: "John Jones, attorney-at-law. Real estate and insurance. Collections promptly attended to at all hours of the day or night. Good Ohio cider for sale at five cents a glass." A storekeeper had on his win-dow the legend: "Wall paper and marriage licenses," thus announcing two commodities for which there was a very small demand. One of the prominent citizens of such a town was gambler, a farmer, a fighter and a school teacher all in ong. There seemed to the minds of the inhabitants of the country nothing incongruous in this mixing up of occupations, it being taken for granted that a man would endeavor to make a living in the ways for which he seemed best fitted. CHINESE QUICK CALCULATOR.

mattes in the Shop of a Col-Charlie Chan, a Chinese curio dealer of Colorado Springs, Col., is a mathematician whose ability to solve the most intricate of problems with almost lightning capacity, by use of a Chinese abacus, has just come to light, says the Boston Transcript. Some eastern tourists made purchases of Chan the other day aggregating $389.82. These purchases ranged from 5 cents to $35. The Chinaman took his rack and before the tourists were aware he was counting had the correct result.

This excited the purchasers to ask questions about the mode of calculation, and to give Chan sums to do. The party found that the merchant from the orient had marvelous talent in handling figures. College professors were told of the prodigy, and to satisfy thema dexterity in handling his beads and an accuracy in computation that caused the professors to pronounce him a wonder. Chan is regarded as the wealthlest Chinaman in Colorado and is a successful business man of 35 years of that broke. The north end of Shaw back for 2,000 years. His musical talent is also remarkable.

JUST AS HE DREAMED IT. Vision That Rendered an Engineer Powerless to Avert Collision. George Anderson, of Springfield, Ill.,

an engineer on the Wabash railroad.

died of injuries which he received in a head-on collision at Naples recently.

On the morning of the accident Anderson dreamed that he had been in a collision, that he had been pinloned beneath his engine, and that the escaping steam had begun to burn his flesh, when he awoke. Anderson was troubled by the dream and told his family about it. He said he felt that there was a warning in the dream, and he was almost per-suaded not to go out on the road that day, but he went. Anderson talked to his fireman about the presentiment. It evidently preyed upon his mind, for he became abstracted in manner and almost heedless of his surroundings. The nearer the train approached its destina-tion the more distraught Anderson be-came, and he had the appearance of dreaming again as he went about his work in the cab. He did not give his usual attention to the fireman, and the latter felt that something was wrong with the engineer.

At Bluffs Conductor Garrison got the orders at the depot and took them to Anderson. The engineer heard them read and attended to the reading in the same absent-minded manner that had marked his conduct throughout the morning. Taking the copies, he mechanically placed them under his seat curbing. cushion. As the conductor turned away from the cab Anderson called him back

"I am going to have one of the most swful wrecks you ever heard of." The conductor was startled, and asked him what made him say this.

"I know it is so," replied Anderson, "because I had trouble with my engine all last night and could not sleep. I am Garrison told him he had only suf fered a nightmare. Anderson shook his head gloomily and said he knew the acat Naples and wait for that train to take the siding. When the point was reached Anderson gave no indication of stopping his engine, and as the train dashed by the switch the fireman saw his engineer sitting as if in a trance At the same moment he saw the local coming down upon them. A collision was inevitable and the fireman sprang for the footboard, crying to the en gineer to jump.

Anderson looked at the fireman in a dazed manner, but made no movement toward the cab entrance. The fireman sprang out and the trains rushed to gether. Anderson was caught beneath his engine just as he had dreamed he would be and the steam enveloped him. He was finally taken from his awful position, but he had received injuries from Unusual Train of Events at a Country Funeral in Maine. During a funeral in the town of Cutler two days ago two lovers who had been alienated from each other for a month were brought together under peculiar and painful circumstances, and before the services were ended a complete reconciliation was effected. The chief mediators in the affair were honey bees-a whole swarm of them. After short services at the house the body was taken to the family tomb in another part of the town. Willis Smith, the rejected suitor, one of the pallbear-ers, rode in a carriage ahead of the hearse, and Miss Milly Loring, the woman in the case, occupied a top buggy driven by Mr. Clark, and brought up the rear of the procession among the neighbors and friends. As soon as the tomb was unlocked and the coffin taken to its resting place great crowds of angry bees swarmed out, stinging kindred, friends and bearers, until everybody howled with pain. Mr.

Clark, the man who was escorting Miss

Loring, jumped from his carriage and fied for a stream of water 20 rods away.

whereupon his horse got up a brisk runaway right among the mourners.

The animal had made one circuit about the cemetery and was bolting through the gate for a two-mile home run, when it was caught by Mr. Smith, who led it to a place of safety, and did what he could to alleviate the distress of Miss Loring. Meantime the men of the party had built a fire, which scorched the wings of the bees and caused them to fall to the ground. When Mr. Clark returned from the stream he found Mr. Smith and Miss Loring sitting side by side applying wet clay to their bee stings. Both were eating honey and talking as if they had always been friends. Mr. Clark took his horse and drove home without asking any questions,-N. Y. Sun. tortoses and Buth. The tortoise is not an animal one would naturally fix upon as likely to be afraid of rain, but it is singularly o. Twenty-four hours or more before rain falls the Gallapagos tortoise makes tor some convenient shelter. On a bright clear morning when not a cloud is to be seen the denizens of a tortoise farm on the African coast may be seen sometimes heading for the nearest overhanging rocks; when that happens down during the day, and as a rule it comes down in torrents. The sign never fails. This pre-sensation, to coin a word, which exists in many birds and beasts may be explained partly from the increasing veight of the atmosphere when rain is forming, partly by habits of living and partly from the need of moisture which is shared by all. The American cat bird gives warning of an ap derstorm by sitting on the low branches of the dogwood tree wnether this union of the feline with the canine is invariable the deponent sayeth not) and uttering curious notes. Other birds, including the familiar robin, it is said, give similar evidence of an impending change in the weather.
