Banna Hanged in Effigy by a Colored Mil. termination

WASAINGTON, April 11 .- At noon today the president transmitted his nessage to congress, outlining the corditions that exist between America and Spain. In effect it shows the utter impossibility of a peaceful settlement of the Cuban affair, and cites the fact that any armistice sought by Spain is only for the purpose of gaining time to better prepare for repelling any action that may be taken by this government.

Congress will at once pass a resolution acknowledging the independence of the Cuban republic, and an open declaration of war may be expected at any time. Such a resolution will receive almost the unanimous vote of tally wounded, and George Baker killboth houses, and will meet with no ed. > Yet the Knowledge of the Assavia Is Necessary, It Is Said, to Determine Its Exact Location.

It is comomnly said that Johannesburg is built on gold; it might be as truly said that it is built on science, or, in the concrete, on cyanide of potassium. I reckon that one-third of the workable mines, possibly one-half, are now shut down or unopened; but had it not been for the MacArthur-Forrest cyanide process-discovered just ten years ago-50 per cent. of the workings still open would be closed. From first to last the extraction of gold is a matter of chemistry. The visitor to a mineralogical collection has seen specimens of ore with glittering flakes or crystal grains of the precious metal. A well-known Canadian geologist was once taken to a mine, and on the strength of the sheen of splendid ore on the side walls of the mine passages he gave a certificate of the richness of the workings. The sparkling nuggets had been placed there, and the renown of the professor suffered somewhat. You may traverse the underground ways of Johannesburg for miles without seeing a glean of what the miners call "visible." It is the assayist who tells us there is gold, and with refined modern methods he can say exactly how much; but, so far, it passes the wit of man to get it all out. When a lump of ore is brought to the surface, if it contains any gold at all it is rarely more than one grain in 20,000, oftener one in 50,000. The first thing to determine is whether there is celihood of any of the me this purpose there has lately come into pretty general use the sorting process What is wanted is the conglomerate. the rock, known as reef, with quartz

The rough stone pr them on a revolving table, and then could at once distinguish by inspection the lumps of quartz or sandstone that were no good; though, as I have asid there is not from one week's end to other a scintillation of gold to guide them. This done, the remaining ore is crushed in steel mortars by metal stamps or pestles weighing over 1,000 pounds each. They pound the stone so exceedingly small that it flows out in a thin stream of muddy water through a screen with meshes numbering 700 to 900 per square inch. Night and day these ponderous stamps are grinding to this minuteness quartz, pebbles, pyritic iron and flinty cement that have for untold ages been buried like misers, embracing their treasure deep in the rocks. All the rest is pure chemistry. The soapy-looking water flows over copper plates faced with quicksilver. Man himself is not more eager than this element to clutch the precious metal, and before the liquid has flowed a foot the mercury has laid hold of all the free gold. The two form an amalgam, and the mercury, being easily retorted off by heat, can Press. He writes them well, too, and be used again and again.
