James Cleary, a leading stockraiser of Upper Burnt river, arrived in this city Monday evening says the Baker City Democrat. He states that the fiercest wind and snow storm of the year took place Monday morning in his section. The storm was almost of the violence of tornado or blizzard. Mr. Clary said his horses could not face the strong wind and blinding snow and that he was compelled to return to his ranch and wait until the storm had exhausted its force before he could proceed on his journey to this city.

From Monday's Daily. Miss Clothilde Love, of Wasco, is visiting in the city.

Mrs. Judge Bradshaw has been quite ill the past few days. Ad Keller is confined to his hom with an attack of fever.

Mr. and Mrs. King, of Prineville are visiting in the city. J. Wollner, the San Faancisco wool buyer is in the city again.

J. M. Marden and W. F. went to Hood River today. P. E. Oruduff and Millie Mortz have been granted license to wed.

"I have long felt that if fruitgrowers would realize the full market value of their crops they must abandon isolated and independent methods of shipment and organize themselves into unions or associations for the express purpos of marketing their fruit. The princips market for our surplus fruit is in the empire east of the Rocky mountains. In the struggle to reach this market the advantages are all on the side of the large shipper. The smaller ones are left out in the cold or confined to a precarious and often glutted home market. Hence thousands of bushels of valuable fruit annually go to waste, and orchards are allowed to go to wreck and ruin, under pretense of overproduction, when the fault lies more in the lack of sound and intelligent business methods in marketing No industry responds more readily to intelligent business methods than fruitraising, and when these are suplemented by intelligent business methods in marketing there will be neither over production or production at a loss. But the tendency of the times, Hugh Jackson and family left this in every department of business enterprise, is toward centralization. Combinations under whatever purpose, largely control the markets of the world. We may deplore the fact, but the fact remains, and must be met, if met at all. by intelligent combination on the part of the producers. Middle-or at best fail to get the best shipping rates or the best prices. "I would never ship a pound of fruit left this morning for Hay Creek to to be sold on commission. Three times out of four the fruit so shipped, especially if green, is practically a total loss to the shipper. As soon as it gets into the hands of the commission men it gets into the hands of the enemies of the small dealers. It is high time that the later should combine for their own protection, not to say salvation. The fruitgrowers in all other states form combinations for am now a well man. I know they marketing their fruit, and the result saved my life, and robbed the grave of offreighters who are bringing wool to all other states form combinations for has always been better prices for the producer. The fruitgrowers of Hood River valley, in my own county, through their Fruitgrowers' Union. get better prices for their apples and berries than any other locality in the state. I know of some growers who, through this agency, obtained $2.50 a box for their apples, while many in other parts of the state realized little over 50 cents, and the better price was much more the result of intelligent their trip, but it is understood here business methods in disposing of it that they are looking into the pros

"I would therefore, have the fruitgrowers of each district or shipping point, as may be most convenient, organize themselves into a union for the marketing and disposal of their product. Let them place the business of shipping and marketing in the hands of an honest, intelligent, progressive management, and the average results will undoubtedly be the best that can be obtained under existing conditions. To secure uniformity the fruit should be packed at one place and under the supervision of a competent inspector. Each union should have a handsome and attractive label to place on all boxes and packages, and no effort should be spared to make the label a certificate of the character and quality of the fruit it marks. Honesty is the best policy in fruit packing as in everything else, and a simple business housand times that honest, uniform, careful and attractive packing, such as can be easily effected through a fruitgrowers' union, always pays a

"Lube Lue." Next Ralph Gifford sang a pretty song that was followed by which the balls and cubes were gracefully manipulated by the little tots. ! "The Farmer" was prettily sung by Ralph Gifford and Loyd Wells, and the little boys told just the farm is onducted, and Jessie Jones explained the process of making bread. This was followed by a recitation in which Winnifred Douthit, Jesse Hostetler, Bernice Moore and Aileen Kelly told how butter is made. The little folks next sang "Make a Ball for Baby" and then all engaged in the "bunnie" game, wherein all but one, who was the fox, appeared in the costume of rabbits. The closing number was a
