An account of the fight is in progress and will be published in our columns as soon as possible.

In the mythology of Ancient Greece Hymen, the god of marriage, was the half brother of Aphrodite, the goddess of love. The ancients believed that marriage and health were inseparable and that as a result the Greeks at that time have ever since looked upon as types of physical perfection.
Sickly mothers cannot bear healthy children. The prospective mother should use every precaution to preserve and foster her health. Not alone for the sake of the little one to come, but because she herself is a healthy woman is in no danger and in very little pain at her time of trial. There must be preparation for this time. Nature makes the preparatory period three-fourths of a year and women who take the hint from nature and use the time properly need have no fears of the outcome. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will save my life. I used it for a full year and it cured me of a disease of the female system which I had taken for years. It is the invention of Dr. R. W. Pierce, of St. Louis, Mo., and is a reliable and safe remedy for all diseases of women.
Mrs. O. S. Little, of Downingtown, Pa., writes: "I cannot praise your Favorite Prescription enough. I have not had a baby for five years, but in July last I had a baby and since I got up I have had one sick day." Sick women can consult Dr. Pierce by letter free of charge. Every letter is held strictly private and confidential.
Bringing more work on women's clothing, by advising women to "write to a woman who understands women's needs." It is useless to seek advice about disease of any woman who is not a physician. So far as known no qualified women physician can be recommended.

Scrofula and Consumption
People tainted with scrofula very often develop consumption. Anemia, running of the ears, scaly eruptions, imperfect digestion, and enlargement and breaking down of the glands of the neck, are some of the more prominent of scrofula symptoms—Are fore-runners of consumption. These conditions can be arrested, consumption prevented and health restored by the early use of Scott's Emulsion

PROBABLY A FOUL MURDER.
Mystery Surrounding the Finding of a Body in the Columbia.
The finding of the body of a man floating in the Columbia at the big eddy above The Dalles by Walter Roy last Saturday may lead to the disclosure of a foul murder that has been committed at some point up the river within the past month.
Yesterday, Justice J. J. Horick, of Rainier precinct, Klamath county, held an inquest over the remains, and called to his assistance as experts, Dr. J. H. Hudson, of this city, and Dr. V. T. Cook, of Rockland.
An examination of the body made by Dr. Hudson and Cook in presence of the jury, revealed the fact that it was the body of a white man between the age of 35 and 40 years. It was clad in a blue jumper, cotton flannel undershirt, knit drawers and conch shoes, without any stockings. A peculiar feature of the clothing was that the trousers, instead of being buttoned several inches long instead of a button—longer than any one would use for a fastener if he were alive, and this leads to the belief that the drawers had been fastened after the man was dead. Around the waist was a leather strap, which might have been used as a belt or might have been used to attach a weight to the body. On the head were several scalp wounds that had the appearance of having been made with some sharp instrument. The body had apparently been in the water for some time and was so badly decomposed as to be beyond recognition.
The physicians on examining the dead man's teeth discovered that some expensive work had been done in his mouth, probably costing $75, which indicates that he had at some time been well-to-do. Apparently there had been no dental work done on the lower teeth, but there were gold fillings in the left lateral incisors and two middle incisors and in one of the right incisors. The two left upper incisors had been extracted and in their place were two gold teeth, bridged between the canine and first molar, both of which were crowned giving the appearance of four gold teeth. Dr. Hudson says the crown and gold teeth at his office in this city, and they may at some future time serve as evidence in identifying the murdered man, as the work in the mouth would readily be recognized by the dentist who did it.
From appearance there was about two weeks growth of stiff black beard on the face of deceased, but the features were not recognizable.
The jury before whom the inquest was held returned a verdict that the body was that of an unknown man who came to his death from causes not known to jury, but it was the opinion of all who were present at the inquest that the deceased had been murdered, but where and by whom could not be determined by the jury.

ONE VICTIM OF VESUVIUS.
An American Who Lost His Life on the Burning Mountain July 29.
These came near being a tragedy on Mount Vesuvius recently, when several lives were lost near the crater. The crater were all but swept away by streams of molten lava which poured from the mountain. This fact recalls the death of nearly 30 years ago of Mr. Charles Carroll Bayard, of Maryland, who had many relatives in the Dalles.
The accident which cost Mr. Bayard his life happened in 1850. He was an officer in the navy and, arriving at Naples, a party of naval officers and other gentlemen, including Mr. Bayard, went to visit the crater of Vesuvius, which was then semi-active. Among those with him was the late Charles Fucker Carroll, of Baltimore, father of Mr. J. Howell Carroll, now United States consul at Cadiz. Mr. Bayard was the brother of the late Richard B. Bayard, father of Mr. Richard B. Bayard, of Baltimore, and a relative of the late Thomas F. Bayard.
The party had reached the summit of the mountain, when suddenly there was a shower of red-hot stones thrown down from the top. All hands took to their heels, and a few moments later discovered that Mr. Bayard was lying on the ground behind them. One of the heavy stones had struck him on the arm, making a frightful wound. He was taken back to Naples and given the tenderest nursing, but he died, and his body buried there, his tomb having been suitably marked in later years.
A strange thing about the accident was the fact that Mr. Bayard was loath to make the trip which ended in his death. He had a presentiment that he ought not to go, and even in the carriage on the way to the mountain top he seemed to be stopped and declared that he would get out and walk back to Naples. His companions remonstrated with him and tried to convince him that his presentiment was but a foolish fancy, and he finally consented to accompany the party.
When he was hurt none of his friends had the slightest idea that he was fatally injured and believed that he would be well in a few weeks. Not so with him, though. "You may amputate my arm," he said, "or do anything you like, but you cannot not save my life. I am going to die. I felt it when I started for the mountain, and now that this has happened I am convinced that my mind can save me."
He was right. He lingered for about ten days and then died.—Baltimore Sun.

Portland papers are making a vigorous protest against the practice in yore in that city in obstructing the way for the display of merchandise and bicycle racks, which they claim in some places so nearly take up all the walk that pedestrians often have to take the streets in order to get by. The papers certainly are justified in making these complaints. The practice is a nuisance, and the merchants occupying two or three feet of sidewalk the whole distance of their store to make a display of wares, and then placing a bicycle rack on the outer edge of the walk, leaving only a few feet of clear space for travel, is a nuisance to the city. It gives visitors to the city the impression that their comfort or convenience is not considered and they make their stay in the city as short as possible. In The Dalles it is different. With very few exceptions, merchants confine the exhibits they make to their stores or at least to the outer walls thereof, leaving the sidewalks for the traveling public. Portland might learn something in good city regulations by sending a delegation here to investigate our methods.

Clark & Falk's favoring extracts are fresh and pure. Ask your grocer for them.
After an illness of nearly a year with consumption, Maud Ruffner died at 5:30 this morning. Deceased was born in The Dalles on March 24, 1877, and had grown to womanhood here. She was the sixth daughter of Peter Ruffner and was possessed of many womanly qualities of a kind to her neighbors, and was a warm friend and loving associate. About a year ago she was taken with consumption and for the past nine months has been confined to the house, a patient sufferer waiting for the final dissolution to come.
The funeral will take place from 2 o'clock family residence tomorrow at 2 o'clock and will be conducted by Rev. D. V. Poling.

The Wheat Crop.
The division of statistics of the department of agriculture, at Washington, has made an estimate of the world's wheat supply for the current year, which shows a decline of 22 per cent in the principal cereal products, wheat, in the United States, and shortage in all wheat producing countries. It is difficult, under these conditions, with a war on our hands and also a war in South Africa, to understand why the price of wheat is so low in this state. The estimates of the foreign product are based upon reports made by the Hungarian Minister of Agriculture, Beerbon's travel list of London and the Bulletin des Hautes de Paris, which is as good as authority as we can get.
The Push club has received another letter from Congressman Moody in which he states that he now fully appreciates the advantage of Fort Stevens as a general recruiting station and that he will bring the matter before the war department as soon as he arrives in Washington.—Astoria Budget.

Clark & Falk have a full line of paint and artists brushes.
Astoria Seed for $9000.
A suit for $2000 damages has been filed in the circuit court at Astoria against that city by Susan Mattoon, guardian ad litem of Henry Mattoon. The complaint alleges that on November 8, 1897, Henry Mattoon, a boy 14 years of age, fell through a roadway on West Bond street to the beach, a distance of 25 feet, and was permanently injured and lamed; that he has paid out $120 for medical attendance, and suffered loss, injury and damage to the extent of $2000. It is also alleged that the accident was due to the bad condition of the street, which the city was out of repair.
