The Oregon Scout.

Vol. II.

Union, Oregon, August 8, 1883.

No. 6.

THE OREGON SCOUT.

An Independent Weekly Newspaper Devoted to the Interests of the Landholders of This State.

JONES & CRADDOCK,

Publishers and Proprietors.

J. S.

MELVIN.

Secretary.

MARRIED ENDING.

A Ceremony that is Fittingly Done.

A ceremony of this kind is called a marriage; and its purpose is not simply to declare the formal end of dependence between the parties, but also to establish and bind them together as a legal partnership. The ceremony is performed by a minister or a judge, and consists of a series of promises or vows made by the parties to each other. These promises are essentially declarations of intent to live together and to assume the duties and obligations of marriage. The ceremony is performed in the presence of witnesses, who are required to attest to the fact that the promises have been made and that the ceremony has been performed. The ceremony is usually performed in a church or other public place, and is followed by a formal declaration of the marriage by a judge or a church authority. The ceremony is performed in the presence of witnesses, who are required to attest to the fact that the promises have been made and that the ceremony has been performed. The ceremony is usually performed in a church or other public place, and is followed by a formal declaration of the marriage by a judge or a church authority.

THE DEATHS.

A bereavement to some attorneys lost in the general upheaval of life.

In the case of a bereavement, it is customary to allow a period of time for the mourning of the deceased, and to provide for the disposal of his estate. The period of mourning is usually a period of seven days, and during this time the mourners are expected to refrain from all public and social gatherings, and to observe a period of mourning. The disposal of the estate is usually managed by a executor or administrator, who is appointed by the court and is authorized to take charge of the estate and to distribute it among the heirs.

EAST MANAGEMENT.

Choice Venison, the Mammal of the Month of September, To Be Described in Its Natural State.

Venison is the meat of the deer, and is one of the most popular meats in the world. It is obtained by hunting or by the raising of deer on farms. The venison is usually obtained from the deer that are killed during the hunting season, and is sold at prices that are lower than the prices of other meats. The venison is usually sold in the form of steaks, and is cooked in a variety of ways. It is a very lean meat, and is rich in protein and other vitamins.

END OF TEXT.