In this issue will be seen the double column advertisement of the LINCOLN MEDICAL INSTITUTE AND WATER CURE. We take pleasure in calling the reader's attention to it as it is an institution worthy the patronage of the public. It was visited last week by our general agent who found it in the most complete working order. The institute is founded on the most liberal plan, medically speaking, as they employ in the treatment of chronic diseases all good remedial agents. The building contains fifty-six rooms besides parlors and offices, and is thoroughly equipped with all kinds of modern apparatus. Their Bath department is very complete, and they are giving their patients great benefit from the mode of treatment. In the Institute skilled nurses are employed, who are skilled in the art of Massage, which is said by those who have tried it to be of great power in the management of diseases which have resisted other methods. They have also introduced for the first time west of Chicago the SWEDISH MOVEMENT CURE, and its power in combatting disease is wonderful. The Institute is corporated and has the hearty co-operation of the city of Lincoln and the State. All patients treated board and room in the Institute building, and the accommodations in this respect are very complete. A large number of invalids, suffering from Piles, Hernia, Catarrh, Disease of the Eye and Ear, Deformities of the Feet, etc., are now there being treated. The staff are all gentlemen of acknowledged ability and will, in our opinion, do for their patients all that could be done.

Doctor. "Yes; you are bilious. Just get a box of Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills; they will cure you."

FOR BILIOUS COMPLAINTS.

Bilious Complaints are caused by torpidity, congestion, or the ulceration of the liver.

The symptoms are dark, greasy, yellow skin, a brown or whitish coat to the tongue, appetite irregular, often a dry cough at night.

The skin sometimes breaks out into pimples and sores, and the whole system is out of order. Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills are one of the very best remedies known for any form of these troubles, and will certainly relieve the sufferer. They are purely vegetable, made from the best drugs by competent hands, and give satisfaction. They are very gentle in their action, causing no griping or unpleasant feeling to the most delicate. A trial will convince any one afflicted with billousness that Wright's Indian Vegetable Pills is the medicine he needs.

Brown Bread.

If the legs are not hollow, why is it they get drunk so easily?

There is a gorge in Yellowstone Park where no sound can be heard. Not a bad place to keep house.

Perhaps nothing has more of a tendency to sour the milk of human kindness than a snoring man in a sleeping car.

The Chinese have a proverb that every man who rules himself is a king. Royal blood is not scarce in this country if every woman who rules her husband is a queen.

A man who has traveled much claims that only about one married woman in forty-five is free from a look of worried care. Possibly the fact that most husbands now get their hair cut with clippers may have something to do with it.

Dr. Talmage carries sixty thousand dollars life insurance. Is preaching in Brooklyn extra hazardous, or is this a wily attempt on the part of the eloquent doctor to share the joys of paradise with people still on earth when he goes to his reward?

Some day, when the clearing-house of Time has adjusted everything of human kind, to the satisfaction of everybody, except, mayhap, the wages of labor or the size of a woman's feet, it will probably come within the range of possibility for a Dutchman to talk with his hands tied behind him.

The sun was climbing to the zenith with a dripping foot. All nature drooped beneath a brazen sky more disastrous to ambition than continuous disappointment in youth. Naught disturbed the sweltry silence but the click-a-te-click of a self-binder in the harvest field, or the bray of a fish peddler's mule in the distance, when hark! an agonizing shriek breaks through the cobwebs in the granger's ears and chokes the packers in the binding-box! Was it the beautiful heiress of Snickerford Manor blowing the horn for dinner? No. It was Budsicker's boy. He fell over the fence and broke the water jug.—Chicago Ledger.

Rest in Action.

Absolute perpetual rest and absolute perpetual activity are equally incompatible with life. Each duly balanced, is the complement of the other. Sleep is simply rest in its completest form—rest of muscle, rest of brain, and rest of all the organs, save those necessary to existence. The tough heart rests between the beats, nor can it be much accelerated by stimulants without immediate or remote injury. The harder-working lungs rest between inspiration and expiration.

The brain must have rest or fail. Such a case of unresting activity as that of Henry Kirke White—and there have been thousands like it—should show scholars that nature holds it an unpardonable sin to rob the brain of its rightful rest. Others, who toiled like White, instead of paying the penalty in early death have exchanged genius for madness or imbecility.

But a large part of our needed rest may be secured in connection with a high degree of captivity. The clerk threatened with "writer's cramp" may escape, not so well by lying for a month in a reclining chair as by engaging in athletic games, chopping wood, or rambling in the forests.

Generally only a small part of the brain is unduly used, and that may be recuperated by calling into action some other part; by change of mental application. Gladstone doubtless rests his brain from the cares of state as much by such studies as Homer as by the sturdy blows of his axe. The pastor's calls at at the homes of his flock not only double the good of his preaching, most effectually rest his brain by the change.

The mere money-getter tends to become a monomaniac. The miser, dying in filth and rags beside his hoarded gold, is the end of avarice. The power and the disposition to accumulate need to be balanced by the disposition and the power to use acquisitions properly and wisely.

If one has overworked both stomach and brain, let him beware how he yields to temptation to stimulate them artificially to their wonted activity. On the contrary, let him give each a long rest, while he bestirs himself to a general invigoration of his physical system.

So, whatever organ has been overused, rest that. And this can commonly best be done in connection with a full, or a special, activity of other parts.—Youths' Companion.

Attacked by Ants.

Mr. Isaiah Burnerat, a farmer living near Chambersburg, a small country village a few miles from Dayton, O., had a most wonderful experience, narrowly escaping being killed by ants. He was picking blackberries in a wild patch of undergrowth in a dense wood, when suddenly he disturbed millions upon millions of large, black ants. They were under a thin covering of earth, which he stepped on, and almost instantly they crawled up his pantaloon legs, and when he tried to knock them off showed fight. Before he could get out of the heavy growth of brush he was covered from head to foot with the pestiferous ants. They bit him and crawled into his nose, ears, and mouth. He yelled for help, but soon became blinded with the myriads of ants on his head and face, and before he reached the edge of the wood fell helpless to the ground, utterly at the mercy of the ants, and was only saved evidently from death by the timely arrival of his brother.

The insects were the common black ants of a very large size. Burnerat was bitten by them all over the body, and while very sore, it is thought, providing the bites are not poisonous, will recover. The case is without a precedent in this section of the country, and, it is believed, had not aid arrived when it did the ants would not only have killed but eaten their victim.—New York Tribune.

MODERN EDUCATION.

The demand of to-day is for practical knowledge rather than for general information. A man must not expect that the world will hold him in much esteem or pay him liberally for living unless he can do something it wants done. It has nearly forgotten Mezzofanti, who spoke fifty-six languages fluently and understood sixty-four more, while Fulton, Stephenson and Morse, who perfected their several inventions while he lived, are as well known and as highly honored as when their inventions were first introduced. In this progressive age the world expects that a man will specially prepare himself for whatever vocation he chooses; it has no patience with bunglers, and it considers a blunder almost as bad as a crime. Further, the demand for trained talent has become so great yet withal so exacting, that the old plan of the doctors, the lawyers, and the business men educating their successors and assistants in their offices has almost disappeared, because a young man can be prepared so much better and quicker in the schools. By this method valuable time is saved, and no one suffers from the beginner's mistakes. To illustrate the two methods let us compare the way business men in the past were educated and the way they are educated to-day. By the old plan, the young man when he entered the office usually wrote a slow cramped, hand, that he perhaps succeeded in changing to a business hand in three or four years. He could add from twenty-five to fifty figures per minute, but soon tired, and then there was no certainty that the results would be correct. He had to be shown how to make out the various business papers and how to record each business transaction; everything he did had to be carefully looked over so that for a long time he was a hindrance rather than a help in the office. Now, by the new plan, before he enters the office, he has been trained in some school like the Davenport Business College, which is probably the best business school in the country. He writes a plain, rapid hand, and when the correspondence of the firm is important he takes from dictation in short-hand as fast as one of the proprietors can talk, and prints his notes on the writing machine. He has learned to read figures as he would read words, and it tires him just as little to do so; he can add from two hundred to four hundred figures per minute, and make all other calculations with corresponding rapidity.

When he is required to make out any business paper or to record the results of a business transaction, he does not need to be told how to do it, for he has been thoroughly instructed already, first by theory, and afterward by practice.

In case the firm that employs him has a private line by which confidential messages are exchanged with correspondents in other places, his school training is again of use, for he can send and receive messages with the facility of an old operator.

This is only an illustration of the many advantages of this special training, which has almost revolutionized the old ideas in regard to what constitutes an education.

THE DAVENPORT BUSINESS COLLEGE

fits young men to successfully conduct their own business affairs or to give satisfaction when entrusted with the management of the affairs of others. It is preeminently the school that sends out expert accountants. No other school develops students equally well skilled in Rapid Calculation. No other school has a Business Practice course at once so varied, so extended, and that requires so much thinking and original planning on the part of its students.

The following are a few of the advantages the scoool offers to its students: A course in Bookkeeping that illustrates almost every practical form of accounting. The very best of instruction in Rapid Business Writing. A course in Commercial Law and in Political Economy that will be of much benefit in after life. Superior advantages to those who wish to learn Phonography, Type-Writing or Telegraphy. Pleasant and commodious rooms, fitted with comfortable and substantial furniture.

The Care of the Hair.

The care of the hair is an important branch of fashion at all times, though often fashion dictates an injudicious treatment, and prescribes modes against all rules of health and reason. Such importance has been given to the hair that some philosophers make the chignon, coils and puffs the index of civilization, and show how eccentricity in head dress and coiffure marks the degredation of time. It is well understood that masses of false hair injure natural growth, but a freak of fashion which seems harmless may be made equally hurtful. This apparently innocent fashion is that of fluffiness and lightness of the hair produced by continual washing. The best specialists on treatment of the hair say that the hair should be washed once in six weeks, and not oftener, and that castile soap and not borax, soda or any other drying material should be used. After washing it is well to rub the scalp with some reliable ointment. The natural oil, which to some appears objectionable, is the life-giving ointment of the hair and should not be destroyed. Dry hair has a dead appearance, the ends split and growth is retarded. The fine comb is mose hurtful, but a soft brush, used judiciously, gives vigor to the scalp and keeps it in a healthy condition. The practice of cutting the ends of the hair is useful, and can be accomplished easily by braiding the hair and then cutting the ends. The care of the hair is certainly as important as that of teeth, but is much more neglected. The rules of its preservation are simple and important. Vigorous brushing, cutting the ends when necessary, washing with castile soap once in six weeks, and the desirable avoidance of false hair should preserve and strengthen the hair, But if the hair comes out and becomes lifeless and thin in spite of this treatment, the best remedy is to seek a reliable specialist on scalp diseases, and to submit to thorough professional direction.
