Don't Eat in a Hurry.

A health journal says that people ought to take three-quarters of an hour for dinner. This is well if there is enough dinner to hold out so long. The penalty for hurrying meals, as most people do, is a grievous attack of dyspepsia. In such a case you will have to resort to Brown's Iron Bitters for cure, as did Mr. J. R. Pinkston, Shorter's Depot, Ala., who writes, "I ound relief in Brown's Iron Bitters after years of suffering from dyspepsia.

LIFE OF GRA

GEN. GRANT AND A CHILD.

A Eurgeon's Reminiscence of the Days of Appomatten.

"At the surrender of Lee," said a surgeon of Erie, in the hearing of a reporter a day or two ago, "I was serving as medical director of the Second Division of the Twenty-fifth Army Corps. After the surrender the division was ordered to join the balance of the corps near Petersburg, and we left Appointtox Court House on the 11th of April, following the south side railroad. The general commanding directed me to take an orderly and proceed to Prospect station and there select a camping ground for the division and also a place to pitch our headquarter tents. I proceeded as directed, and after selecting a suitable camping ground crossed the fields to a large white house near the station. As I rode up to the gate a most venerable and noblelooking gentleman, of probably 65 years, came to the front gate, and I asked him if he would have any objection to our pitching headquarters in his yard. He said: 'I should be very glad to have you do it, as it will be a protection against the vandalism of the stragglers of the army.' He asked me to come in, but I told him I would prefer to sit in the veranda. Finding him to be a Methodist minister and a most polished gentleman, I became interested in him and we at once began to discuss the unfortunate division of the Church in 1844, and then I switched off on to war.

"He took the extreme Southern view. whilst I took as extreme a view of the other side, but the discussion was friendly and exceedingly pleasant to me. I found he really felt that the South had been badly treated in the election of Lincoln and that secession was in his view an act of self-preservation. After the discussion had continued for about an hour he said: 'I take it that the war is now over, so what will your government do with General Lee?' and added, I suppose Mr. Lincoln will follow him with all the vindictiveness of his nature.

"I replied: 'If he gets no punishment only that which originates from the vindictiveness of Mr. Lincoln's nature, it will not kill him, as Mc. Lincoln is one of the kindest-hearted men born into this world.' He gave me a look full of skepticism, and asked me what I meant. I told him that there was much more danger of Mr. Lincoln offending the North by his leniency than to punish out of revenge, and then told him who and what Mr. Lincoln was, dwelling especially on the merciful side of his nature. He replied: 'If that is Mr. Lincoln, the President of the United States, he is not the Lincola described to us by our papers. He is not the man of whom we have heard, and of whom we have read. The Lincoln described to us is a man of blood, and full of venom, who cares neither for the lives nor for the rights of the people, and from whom we have no mercy to expect. This is the demon whom our people have been fighting these four years. After thus delivering himself he said in a subdued tone: 'If you have properly described Mr. Lincoln to me then I have been most shamefully deceived and have as shamefully misjudged him, but, said he, 'I was just as badly deceived in my view of General

Grant. "I asked him if he had ever seen Grant. 'Yes,' said he, 'my house was full of your generals last night. There were Sheridan, Humphreys, Meade, Custer, Ord and quite a number of others, and they were a lively set and full of fun, and all were quite jolly with the exception of one officer whom I noticed sitting in a corner smoking and taking but little part in the sports in which the rest were engaged. They all went out of the house but this solitary, silent man, and as I was going out he asked me where the pump was, as he would like to got a drink. On offering to get him some water, he said: 'No, sir, I am younger than you, I will go myself,' and as I passed out he came up behind me. When in about the middle of the hall this little grand-daughter came running towards me, but the silent man, spreading out both arms, caught her, took her up and fairly smothered her with kisses, saying: 'This reminds me of my little girl at home and makes me homesick.' To the question where is your home he replied: 'Galena, Ill., but I have my family at City Point and am anxious to get back to them.' I said, 'will you permit me to ask your name. ''.' 'Certainly; my name is Grant.' 'Grant.' exclaimed L. General Grant,?' and I stood there awestricken and paralyzed with astonishment, whilst my heart went out after this man. I thought to myself, here is a man whose name is now in the mouth of man, woman and child throughout the civilized world and yet withall he exhibits on emotion and seems unconcerned and unmoved until the little child reminds him of his loved ones at home, and I fairly broke down, as General Grant had been pictured out to us as a bloody butcher, and I had looked for a man looking as savage as a Comanche Indian. To say I was agreeably disappointed when I saw Grant express my feelings but feebly, and now you give me another surprise by your description of Mr. Lincoln.

The police of New York recently received advice to arrest two small boys who are arrive by the train from Noauk, Conn. I aimed my panie-price cane at the driver of a cream-colored car with a blue stomach, and remarked, 'Hi, I went inside, clear to the further end, and sat down by the side of a young woman who filled the whole car with sunshine. I was so happy that I gave the conductor half a dollar and told him to keep the change. If by chance she sees this I hope she will remember me. Pretty soon a very fat woman came into the car and aimed for our quarter. She evidently intended to squat between this fair girl and my-self. But ah, thought I to myself in a low tone of voice, I will fool thee. So I shoved my person along in the seat toward the sweet girl of the Bay State. The corpulent party, whose name I did not learn, had in the meantime backed up to where she had detected a slight vacancy, and where I had seen fit to place myself. At that moment she heaved a sigh of relief, and assisted by the motion of the car, which just then turned a corner, she sat down in my lap and nestled in my bosom like a tired baby elephant.

A Tax on Bachelors.

A bill has been introduced in the Georgia legislature providing that, from and after the passage of the act, all male inhabitants of that state who have arrived at the age of thirty years and who have never married shall be taxed $2.50 per annum for the enjoyment of this unmarried state, and each year so long as they shall enjoy the enviable position in life of single blessedness. The measure further provides that any bachelor who marries shall at once be exempted from the tax, while, to quote the language of the bill, "the good ladies of our good and grand old commonwealth are hereby earnestly requested to join the reformers and moralists of the country in order to correct this most monstrous and ruinous evil which now stalks abroad in our sunny south and would be virtuous land."

Wichita Talls (Tex.) Herald, Aug. & It is gratifying to us to note the fact that Messrs, John Cameron and J. Q. Morrison were the lucky owners of onefifth of ticket 48,954 in The Louisiana State Lottery which drew the $25,000 prize in the Drawing of July 14. This forever does away with the reasoning of those crying fraud, because these gentlemen are too well known to admit of a thought for a moment that they would lend themselves as parties to deceive the public. The fact is, they held the ticket and it has been promptly cashed, and our good friends wear broad smiles because of their good luck. In the face of undisputable facts some will still doubt that which has been demonstrated beyond a doubt to any reasonable mind. Talk with these gentlemen and you will then know that The Louisiana State Lottery cashes its drawings and that persons do not have to stand in with them to be lucky. We rejoice with our good friends and hope that they may again hold the winning

It has often been wondered at, the bad odor this oft-quoted doctor was in.
