Alexander H. Stephens on a Locomotive. Over in Jersey City one day recently two or three locomotive effgineers sat talking over strange experiences. and this was the story that one of them told: "I was a young man working on a southern railroad as a fireman when the war broke out. Before the war was over I got an engine of my own; but before I was regularly promoted the engineer of my train fell sick of a sudden, and I was ordered to take the engine out myself. I shipped a brakeman to do my firing, and started away at 6 o'clock in the morning pulling one passenger and half a fighting along my line, but there was a deal of bad feeling everywhere, and lots of lawless deeds were being committed. The track on this road was torn up in two places only a week before, and there was a good bit of talk about train wreckers and the like. At about 8 o'clock at a way station I got a telegram from head quarters to drop all my cars and burry right on to the end of the line with only my locomotive and tender. It was a queer order, but I knew that it was official and I made ready to obey orders, when a little man with a brown slouch hat, who did not look as if he weighed over a hundred pounds climbed up into the cab and said to me that he wished I would let him ride in there with me, he was so anx ious to go forward as far as he could. I told him that my orders were to let nobody ride, and explained that I didn't think I could let him go. "Don't you expect me?" he asked. Itold him I didn't. "It will be all right," he insisted, but when I asked him what was his name and what was his business, he couldn't be induced to tell me. "Then it's all up," said I; "I'll go without you." Then he suggested that he was willing to pay me well for lettaking any chances, and I told him so. I was only waiting till my fireman attended to some business that he had gone down the track about, and then seen the sparks in that little man's eye. Needn't wait for your helper,' he said in that kird o' quiet tone that had a whole battlefield in its very quietness. You needn't wait for your fireman. I'll do his work. Go ahead!' I locked at him, wondering whether not he was crazy, when he calmly took out a shiny pistol and tapped gently on one of the brass rods of the cab seat, and he repeated once more, 'Go ahead!' I was knocked clean out. What could the stranger mean? That sparkle in his eye grew brighter and brighter, and seemed fairly to dance like a diamond under the sun. 'Do you understand?' he inquired in the quiez tone that pierced me like a bullet. 'Go ahead, I say.' I went ahead. On, on, and on we dashed, through the fields and forests and by the villages, stopping nowhere, my passenger-I felt that he was a madinan-keeping a close watch on us all the while. I was scared. That pistol was still in his hand, and like the little hand of a watch its rat-a-tatat on the brass rod kept counting of the seconds and the minutes till I grew almost crazy myself. I was rattled. Aport of film kept coming before my eyes. He said not one word, but I felt that his searching gaze was on me all the while. And finally I could stand it no more. There was a rush of blood to my head. I staggered and fell, with the town I was bound for just in sight. What I remember next was a buzz of voices | S nato over me as I lay in a doctor's office. Aside from a nervous shock I had suffered nothing. My engine had brought me into town all right, and had come to a halt at the station as gently and amiably as any old family horse. The man who had rode down with me had known enough to govern her, but he had waited at the depot after arriving only long enough to tell a bystander that I was in need of help on the engine's floor. A week after I learned the reason for the strange order that had been given me to hurry on with my locomotive and no ears, and I learned, too, the name and mission of my pas-'Take on little man with brown read: slouch hat; drop all cars and rush forward with no stops. The operator had carelessly left off the first phrase for headaches, caused by a disordered about the little man with the slouch hat,' and given me only the last of the order. The man? He was Alexander H. Stephens, and he had important bon.

war information that he had been willing to trust to nobody else. he apologized to me after for his strange actions, but he said he felt that only in free from pain. I cheerfully recommend it such a way could he ever manage to to my friends and the public. T. R. A short time since a gentleman who lived in a small town not far from Buffalo went the way of all flesh, and the burial ceremonies to be performed over his remains were committed to the charge of a local undertaker. The funeral was quite an anportant one, for the gentleman was prominent in his own town and a number of his friends from the city were present. The services were held in the church, but just as the time arrived for taking the remains to the cemetery a severe thunder-storm came up and it was considered best not to start until the worst of the storm was over. The wait was rather an embarrassing one, but the undertaker was equal to the emergency. Standing on the chancel steps he shouted so as to be heard in the choir loft at the other end of the building: "The organist will please give us a little music to while away the time." Even the mourners smilfect tonic, appetizer, blood purifier, and a sure cure for ague. 50c. ed -Buffalo Express.

Biblical Examples.

A bright five-year-old at the Highlands, who, it will be needless to say, is an interested member of the Sunday school, was watching the moving of a family of boys across the street with great anticipation written in his face. His mother, noticing it, told him she didn't want him to play with those boys because they were Jews. "Well, mamma," said the bright little fellow, after a moment's reflection, "wasn't Jesus Christ a Jew?"

Logical inference, surely. The same boy on another occasion was being admonished for his unruly behavior.

"Why," said his grandmother with a sigh. "I don't know what will become of you if you are such a bad boy."

"Grandma," said be, his bright black eyes twinkling and his voice full of hope for dozen freight cars. There wasn't any his own future, "wasn't St. Paul a bad man once? and he turned out well.

Sam Jones on Orthodoxy.

God knocked the orthodoxy out of Peter 1,800 years ago. Then the Jews couldn't see how God could save a gentile, and now, after 1,800 years, we are here and cannot see how God can save a Jew. What is man's orthodoxy? Nothingelse but a fishing pole and line. If a fellow is eternally fixing on his tackle, how's he ever going to catch fish? The trouble with the preachers in Chicago is that they think God loves a christian better than a sinner, a churchmember better than a bar-keeper. If we put the thing in the right light we could understand that Christ died because God Whatever man may have, if the spirit of love is wanting, he misses every-

When Does Old Age Begint

When does old age begin? At forty-five, t is said, the amount of combustian which keeps the furnace of the human body in blast commences to decrease and diminshes until three-score years and ten, more or less, when the fires are drawn and the flickering flame dies out. That is the physiological way of looking at it. But some men are old before they are out of their teens, while others apparently never grow old, though they live to be centenarians. The poet's way of looking at it is the best: "Call him not old - hose visionary brain Holds o'er the past its undivided reign. For him in vain the envious seasons roll Who bears cturnal summer in his soul."

This at least seems to be the way in which David Lattell, of Sumner, Ia., looks at life, for though now in his eightieth year he has taken a new lease on life and is apparently determined to hold on to it. Athlophoros did it for him and he acknowledges his debt to it in terms of enthusinsm. Mr Littell tells his own story:

"I was past seventy-seven and had been ifflicted with rheumatism three years and ight months. I had lost one third of my eight and could not walk, but shalled along with crutches. Sleep had described me, my nerves were all shattered, and there was no strongth in my hands, wrists, knees or feet. I could not sit down or get up out of a chair without help, and ob! such pain, worse at night than in the day. There was neither sleep nor rest, and the outlook was painful in the extreme.

But thanks be to God and Brother Inskip for sending me a paper containing a notice of the cures made by Athlophoros and thanks be to you for sending me a bot-tle. It appears to me the hand of God is in it all the way, and if you did not hear me shout, why then I did not shout loud enough, that is all. The medicine arrived ne Saturday night after I had gone to bed. In the morning my son prepared me a dose of two tenspoonfuls in milk. I took it and felt it at once all over. After that I took but one tenspoonful at a time until I had finished the bettle. How did it act? Why, like a charm. On Monday morning I rose, dressed, and walked out into the kitchen without crutches or cane and wished them all a happy New Year.

"My pain is all gone and I rest well. My son, sceing such a great change in me, wrote for ten bottles in order, as he says, to make a permanent care of it. It is all more like a dream than reality. I have written to four of my friends who are afflicted with rheumatism about the great medicine and I shall write to others, and in this way try

"Some fourteen months ago," says A. Hayward, of Burlington, Ia., "I was attacked with inflamatory rneumatism. I tried a dozen different kinds of medicine said to cure rheumatism, but to no purpose. Finally, I procured a bottle of Athiephores. After using the bottle it did me so much good that I bought another. but did not have to use more than a third of the second bottle before I was entirely cured. From that time up to the present I have never had anything like rheumatic pains, and I thank Athlophoros for the cure."
