

THE STARS SHINE OUT.

The stars shine out and gild the sky, softly the night winds breathe and sigh...

Sandorf's Revenge.

A SEQUEL TO MATHIAS SANDORF AND DOCTOR ANTEKIRTI.

"Drunk! Drunk! After drinking a bottle or two of this washy wine, when we are accustomed to gin and whiskey in the Manderaggio!"

The coincidence between the departure of Doctor Antekirti and the warning he had received from Sarcany to beware of him could not but awake Zirona's suspicions.

This famous Doctor Antekirti. He even managed to get nearer than them in the crowd that the music had attracted to the Villa Bellini, but he did not do this without being noticed by the Doctor and Pierre.

From a Young Wife's Diary. George said last week that we must economize, for trade seemed to be paralyzed. It is funny that trade should have waited till we got married and then get paralyzed.

RELIGIOUS STATESMEN. Fervid Piety of the Senators from Georgia—Deacons in the House. As far as appearances go the most religious men in either branch of congress are the two senators from Georgia.

HERE AND THERE. Philadelphia spent $325,000 for drink last year. A New York dining room is named after Tweed. Highland county, Ohio, has a "Folsom" postoffice.
